

German Weekly Will Disclose Soon:

Israel Full-Fledged Nuclear Power

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Israel has completed five 20-kiloton atomic bombs without test explosions and has become the world's sixth nuclear power.

In a story by Peter Lust, special German affairs correspondent, the newspaper says the bombs were completed at Israel's nuclear test station in the Negev Desert.

The story says the existence of the bombs — a sixth is almost finished — was discovered by a group of journalists of the German weekly Der Spiegel (The Mirror).

Der Spiegel's story is to be published later this week, it says.

The newspaper says the bombs were completed in early February at the test station 11 miles from the pioneer settlement of Dimona, halfway between Beersheba

and the southern tip of the Dead Sea.

It says that as soon as the bombs were completed, they were rushed to a destination whose location is Israel's best-guarded military secret.

It says Israel could deliver the bombs with its A-4 Skyhawk jets, part of its operational air force. Later, F-4 Phantoms could be earmarked for that purpose, although the Phantoms are not operating yet.

The bombs are similar in type to those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the newspaper says.

It says the existence of the nuclear test station near Dimona was "reportedly" discovered nine years ago by a U.S. U-2 observation aircraft. Security is so strict, the newspaper says, that an Israeli jet accidentally straying over Dimona after being hit by Egyptians on June 6, 1967, was shot down by Israeli rockets.

The pilot was reportedly killed.

Apparently, the test station contains a reactor capable of producing both nuclear and thermonuclear bombs, the newspaper says.

It says the station appears

Israeli artillery shelled Port Said Wednesday for the first time since the 1967 war, and an Egyptian military spokesman said a spotter plane directing the bombardment was shot down. In addition to battling daylong across the Suez Canal, Arab and Israeli forces also fought across the Jordan River ceasefire line.

Lebanese army troops opened a major offensive inside their borders Wednesday against Syrian-backed Arab guerrilla forces who have defied an ultimatum from the high command in Beirut to get out of the sensitive border area with Israel.

Israeli military spokesmen said their jet planes attacked an Arab commando base inside Jordan and their ground forces exchanged artillery and small arms fire with Egyptian and Jordanian troops across the eastern and western fronts.

Air Canada, Union
Try to Fix Agenda

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and airline negotiators met Wednesday for the first time in more than a week, adjourning until today their talks aimed at settling the Air Canada strike now in its third week.

The talks, which have moved from Montreal to Ottawa and back to Montreal since the strike began April 20, are to resume at about 10:30 a.m. at a downtown hotel.

Five members from the Air Canada negotiating team and five from the International Association of Machinists formed a subcommittee Wednesday to discuss procedure and an agenda for the talks.

The subcommittee met for about two hours shortly after both sides returned from a supper break Wednesday night. It also met earlier in the afternoon for about 45 minutes.

Mike Rygas, Canadian vice-president of the machinists union, said the decision to form the subcommittee was taken in the absence of a mediating party in hopes of finding new

Smoking Health Hazard

CBC Radio, TV Dousing
All Tobacco Advertising

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced Wednesday all tobacco advertising will be halted on both its radio and television networks because of the smoking health hazard.

Directors of the publicly-owned corporation agreed on the move at an Ottawa meeting last week.

A CBC statement quoted president George Davidson as saying there "are increasing indications of public awareness of the smoking problem as well as the diversity of representations made before the Parliamentary committee on health. Trends of public opinion regarding the health considerations related to smoking indicate a growing international concern."

AFTER 5 P.M.

To date, the CBC has scheduled tobacco advertising after 9 p.m. to avoid influencing younger viewers. It also has made it a practice of accepting only tobacco commercials that stress brand preference rather than the emphasis on smoking as a pleasurable experience.

CBC tobacco advertising revenue amounts to about $700,000 annually. However, since most tobacco advertising has been carried in the prime 9 to

Anti-Missile Action
Could Skip House

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday that if the government ever agreed to bringing the proposed United States Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system under the control of the North American Air Defence Command, the move would not necessarily be discussed by Parliament.

T. C. Douglas, the NDP leader, sought assurance that Canada would not agree to such a move without first consulting Parliament.

IF TO GOVERNMENT

He based his question on a comment by Lt. Gen. E. R. Sharp, NORAD's deputy commander and a Canadian, who told a Commons committee Tuesday that from a military point of view the ABM system should be under NORAD control.

Trudeau said that Sharp "obviously implied that the matter was for a political decision." It was the intention of the government to take political responsibility, and he said the question might not be discussed in Parliament before.

He said the matter now is before the Commons defence committee and MPs are free to express their opinions there "and we hope they will." Referring to another question in the defence committee Tuesday while Gen. Sharp was appearing, Harold Winch (NDP, Vancouver East) asked whether Canada plans to extend its NORAD base at North Bay, Ont., so it could be used as an alternative headquarters to Colorado Springs, Colo.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said no extension would be required for this. It would be necessary only for the Canadian government to accept the proposition and formalize it. Douglas asked whether there are any plans to remove the Bomarc missiles from North Bay. Cadieux said there are no plans to remove them before the mid-1970s.

U.S. May Sink Tons of Nerve Gas at Sea

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

The Pentagon announced Wednesday a tentative plan to ship to the east coast large amounts of chemical agents — including deadly nerve gas — for disposal in the Atlantic Ocean. One member of Congress called for an investigation to determine if the plan endangered human and marine life.

A spokesman said the operation, to cost $2,300,000, would involve shipping 27,000 tons of the material via rail to New Jersey, where it would be loaded aboard four surplus Second World War Liberty ships which would subsequently be towed to sea and sunk 250 miles from shore.

The defence department released details of the plan, which it said was tentative, after Rep. Richard McCarthy, D-N.Y., disclosed it to newsmen. He released letters written to Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and Transportation Secretary John Volpe questioning whether the rail shipments will endanger human lives and whether dumping the poisonous substances in the ocean would damage marine life.

A report from Elizabeth, N.J., said the plan would send tank cars full of the deadly gas through four New Jersey towns on elevated tracks. The possibility of a leakage is "too grisly to think about," said Elizabeth city council president Michael McGuire, who expected to be on the line to New Jersey's congressional delegation "first thing in the morning."

The train also would pass through neighboring Rahway, Linden and Perth Amboy, a corridor which along with Elizabeth has 310,000 persons. McCarthy called for a study of alternative means of getting rid of the Second World War chemical agents, but

Maj. Gen. Wendell Coates, the army's chief of information, told newsmen the plan was the safest that could be devised.

If the plan is finally approved, he said, the operation would begin next week and end in August. Most of the material would be shipped by rail from Rocky Mountain

Buyers
Rush
For Marks

BONN (CP-Reuters) — A scramble by speculators to buy West German marks Wednesday in anticipation of a possible upward revaluation approached the proportions of an international monetary crisis which hit world money markets in November.

But a West German government spokesman confirmed that a decision on mark revaluation has not yet been made.

After a day of hectic trading on the Frankfurt market, during which the federal bank was believed to have bought $300,000,000 U.S., the bank took steps to control the flow of money in and out of the country.

Authorities suspended arrangements under which private West German banks borrow United States dollars from the central bank.

Apparently this was designed to stop the possibility of private banks using the dollars for out-of-country transactions. The dollars then could flow back easily into West Germany to heighten the speculative crisis.

NO SWAPS

In technical terms, the federal bank announced it had suspended forward U.S. dollar swap transactions with commercial banks for capital export.

Forward buying is a method of taking an option on a certain currency at the current price for delivery at a future date.

In Frankfurt, the dollar exchange rate closed Wednesday at a buying price of 3.9675 marks, below its official floor price of 3.9700.

Anniversary Mass

Heiled in Spain

MADRID (UPI) — About 200 Falangists and Nazi sympathizers Wednesday attended a Roman Catholic mass for the soul of Adolf Hitler.

Some of the people at the mass wore swastika armbands, and there were several shouts of "heil Hitler."

The mass was held to mark the 24th anniversary of Hitler's death.

After the service, the crowd which included many ex-combatants of the Spanish Blue Division which fought alongside Nazi troops against the Soviet Union, sang the Falangist anthem with their hands raised in the Nazi salute.

Police were present but did not intervene. They briefly detained British TV cameraman Michael Gore on the complaint of a middle-aged man, apparently a German, who said his picture had been taken without permission. A senior police officer said Gore had committed no offence and released him.

DINING OUT: Chef Fred Haupt of the Swiss Restaurant treats his guests in the grand manner. On Tuesday he prepared a magnificent dinner for the Victoria Gourmet Society and it probably ranks as one of the best the group has enjoyed.

For once the portions were exactly correct — there is a tendency to load the plates in so many places. Chef Haupt judged the quantities precisely so that each of his courses was accorded full justice.

After an appetizer of fairly dry sherry, the first course was offered. This was a clear oxtail soup served very hot with a thin slice of the meat. It had been perfectly seasoned and flavored with a dash of sherry.

To accompany the first course, the club had selected a medium brown sherry that went perfectly with the soup. It was an excellent start to what was to prove a fine meal.

The white wine Johannisberg is very popular in Switzerland, and it deserves to be served very cold. It accompanied the fish course — in this case titled Delices de la mer. The Zurich-born chef went to great trouble to see that all his seafood was fresh from the sea.

He had gathered fresh shrimp and oysters and then topped his plates with slivers of soft smoked salmon. The shrimp were served in a delicate cream sauce which enhanced their slight salty taste rather than masked the delicate flavor as is so often the case.

The oysters had been chilled in a jelly made from oyster nectar and were a delight. It was, for me, the outstanding event of the evening. The wine and this seafood dish were absolutely first class. The same wine carried the next course. This was a dish of calf brains in a delicate cream sauce. Not being partial to calf brains, I am in no position to adjudicate this course, but my fellow diners pronounced it delightful.

Chef Haupt chose to serve his asparagus as an individual course, and it was a wise move. The asparagus was tender and the sauce exactly right. The tips were bathed in the cream mouseline so that the diner was able to eat each stick without getting covered in sauce. The vegetable was perfectly fresh and cooked to perfection — tender but not soggy.

At this stage of the dinner it was decided that a refresher be served. It does not take much knowledge of French to work out what a Boule de Canon is but its potency gets a bit of getting used to. This is a mixture of champagne and vodka which prepared the palate for the meat course.

This was spring lamb cooked in the manner of Provence. It naturally has a touch of garlic and a tangy sauce. It was served with rice and a spicy Creole sauce. A rich dry St. Emilion wine carried this course and was also served with the artichoke and butter which followed.

***

Chef Haupt decided one salad style was not sufficient, and so he combined three on each plate with different dressings. He chose lettuce, cucumber and tomatoes for his combination, and it was most successful.

The white wine for the dessert was a French vintage from Alsace. It is called Sylvaner Hugel and it was well chilled.

The dessert was a meringue Romanoff. The meringue itself was cooked to perfection. It was gold and crisp and it topped a plate of fresh strawberries which had been marinated for a day or more in triple sec, the orange-flavored liqueur. The fruit was complemented with fresh whipped cream.

Despite its richness, the dish was in no way cloying. It was a fitting end to the principal course. The cheeses were taken from each end of the spectrum. The first was soft and delicate, while the Swiss appenzel was quite the most powerful variety I have come across in a long time. The cheeses were served with a good red wine, in this case a Chambolle Musigny.

The coffee was accompanied by Grand Marnier, an orange liqueur, and a good cigar. It is one of the delights to be able to end a fine meal with a cigar, and Canada is producing some excellent ones. Because we don't hate Castro, we are able to buy excellent Cuban leaf that is made up here.

Cigar smokers should try Fior del Mundo, which despite its exotic name is made in Montreal. They are without doubt among the best on the market and compare well with the rubber imported cigars in every way except price. E. A. Morris has them.

All in all this was a memorable dinner and Chef Haupt is to be congratulated. If his everyday menu is as fine as his gourmet dinner, the Swiss Restaurant is indeed a fine place to dine.

Arsenal near Denver and Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland to a point near Erie, N.J. for loading aboard ships, with "minor quantities" being shipped by rail from the Anniston Arsenal in Alabama and the Bluegrass Arsenal in Lexington, Ky., to the same point.

Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D-N.J., chairman of a House foreign Affairs subcommittee, immediately announced that he would conduct a hearing Thursday and question about the plan. He said he was concerned about the effect the step would have on sea life and about international implications of the action.

A Pentagon spokesman said about half of the shipment would consist of air force bombs containing liquid nerve gas which vaporizes in the atmosphere and is highly lethal.

McCarthy, refusing to disclose his source of information, said the plan was to begin the shipments May 16.

Coates said the military proposed sinking the ships in 7,200 feet of water. At this depth, he said, "any significant pollution of water is considered virtually impossible."

Even if a container breaks, Coates said, experts estimate that its contents would have an effective underwater life of 185 hours and that in normal circulation it would take the materials 400 years to reach the surface from 7,200 feet.

entirely was built with the active help of France — also a nuclear power — during the year when France was still Israel's closest ally.

Egyptian intelligence became aware of the bomb's completion in late February, the newspaper says.

President Nasser immediately issued a call for help to the Soviet government for Soviet nuclear arms on Egyptian soil.

Moscow refused, but strengthened the Soviet Mediterranean fleet to include ships armed with nuclear warheads.

The newspaper says the Russians simultaneously issued notes to Washington, London and Paris setting up the present four-power conference to end Middle East strife.

Perfect Drug? Forget It

By G. T. THORNTON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thornton: I am an arthritis sufferer and my doctor has been prescribing indomethacin for about a year and a half. It seemed to help me immediately. However, I read an article in a magazine recently stating that indomethacin has not been fully tested and the side effects are many, including even death. Do you think this drug has been tested enough, or should I stop taking it? I am very upset about this.

Mrs. J. B.

Similar worried letters continue to reach me; I'll answer the best I can and, I hope, allay a good deal of this worry.

Remember, to begin with, that there is no drug known to any man which is 100 per cent perfect. Neither is there any drug about which we yet know all there is to know. That includes aspirin, digitalis, and other old standbys we have had for many years.

A big (and highly technical) argument broke out some months ago in a Senate subcommittee hearing. It was a hearing dealing with business, but the dispute centred around indomethacin. It could have centred around some other drug, but it didn't.

The upshot, however, was great worry on the part of patients using the drug.

The facts, as I read them from reports of the dispute, are these:

There are differences of opinion on the testing and on the effectiveness of indomethacin. There are (as with all drugs) side effects in some patients. There are some patients whom the drug does not help. But there have been something like 1,600,000 patients using this drug by now and finding that proper dosage helps them and does not harm them.

The "deaths" mentioned in the hearings are debatable: they were children already severely ill, and the drug in question as well as other drugs — were used. Some died. But that is a far cry from saying that indomethacin caused their deaths. For other children, also seriously ill and given the drug, did not die but got better.

There is a suspicion that the drug may, in children, interfere in some way with their ability to fight off infections.

Canada 'Influenced' To Retain Bombers

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States, through North American Air Defence Command, may be trying to influence Canada against any cuts in anti-bomber defences, informed sources said Wednesday.

They were referring to testimony before the Commons defence committee Tuesday by Canadian Lt.-Gen. Fred Sharp, deputy commander of NORAD, that Russia is showing renewed interest in the manned bomber as a possible weapon against North America.

Gen. Sharp said there has been a "recent increase in Soviet training flights on the periphery of North America," mainly in the Arctic, and that some Soviet planes had approached within 30 to 40 miles of NORAD-protected air space.

Highly-placed sources said there have been no Soviet flights even approaching Canadian air space since last June, when the Canadian defence department reported a flight of five Soviet bombers some 50 miles off Newfoundland.

They said Russia has apparently run training flights in recent months—the U.S. defence department has said as recently as April—toward Alaska and the Aleutians but that no such flights had even headed in the direction of Canada for nearly a year.

NORAD was established as a joint Canada-U.S. command in 1968 and it has always been commanded by an American.

NORAD VIEWS

A Canadian officer has always been deputy commander but he has reflected NORAD and not Canadian views.

Gen. Sharp said NORAD needs a new manned-interceptor and a new airborne system to detect enemy bombers and to control the operations of interceptors.

Canada and the U.S. have been discussing such a system for more than three years without any Canadian decision.

48 PLANES

This country now has three manned interceptor squadrons—48 operational planes—and two Bomarc squadrons comprising 56 missiles. Both the manned interceptor and the Bomarc are armed with nuclear warheads.

Prime Minister Trudeau said Sunday he would not be surprised if a government study recommends ditching of nuclear weapons.

He has declined to deny reports that the government will abandon nuclear weapons at home and abroad.

UNJUSTIFIED

Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, retiring American commander of NATO forces in Europe, said here last week there is no military justification for any troop reduction in Europe.

Trudeau has announced that Canada will reduce its forces in Europe beginning next year.

'No Other Way Out'

Hanoi, Viet Cong Insist On American Pullout

PARIS (UPI) — Viet Cong peace conference delegates Wednesday renewed their demand for a unilateral withdrawal of American troops from South Vietnam and rejected any form of co-operation with the Saigon government.

***

In Tokyo, the North Vietnam news agency distributed an editorial from North Vietnam's liberation army daily which termed "absurd" a U.S. proposal for a mutual troop withdrawal from South Vietnam.

The latest demand for a unilateral pullout of American forces was made by chief North Vietnam negotiator Xuan Thuy in an interview with the Paris newspaper Le Figaro. He accused the Nixon administration of "pursuing and intensifying its war of aggression in Vietnam."

"Far from talking of ending this war," Thuy said, "it has put forward only words about a 'de-Americanization' and a 'Vietnamization' of the war which amounts to making Vietnamese fight the Vietnamese under the American command."

The interview came as officials of all four delegations to the talks prepared for today's session, the 16th formal meeting since the talks began in January.

Thuy ruled out co-operation between the Communists and the Saigon government. He repeatedly urged a unilateral and unconditional withdrawal of all American forces from South Vietnam.

"As I have already stated, the United States, which has sent troops across the Pacific Ocean to attack Vietnam, must stop its aggression and withdraw all American and satellite troops from South Vietnam without asking any condition whatsoever," Thuy said. "This is self-evident. There is no other way out."

***

Chief Viet Cong negotiator Tran Buu Kiem also demanded a complete unilateral withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam in an interview with West German television.

Northerners Quiet On Big Anniversary

SAIGON (AP) — United States 25th Division soldiers and North Vietnamese troops skirmished in a wooded area 35 miles northwest of this South Vietnamese capital.

U.S. infantrymen were reported to have killed 38 North Vietnamese.

Some American officers had expected something spectacular from the North Vietnamese on Wednesday, the 15th anniversary of the fall of the fortress of Dien Bien Phu that sped the French withdrawal from Indochina. But only scattered fighting was reported.

IN SAIGON

In Saigon, Foreign Minister Tran Chan Thanh laid down three procedures for supervision and control of the withdrawal of foreign troops from South Vietnam.

event of agreement on mutual troop withdrawal, supervision would be made "by our own facilities and those of allied forces," by a joint commission of the two sides in the conflict and "by an international organization."

Asked at a news conference what the international organization would consist of, the spokesman replied it could be a new International Control Commission.

The 1954 convention at Geneva ending the French war in Indochina set up an International Control Commission made up of Canada, India and Poland. The Polish veto has made the commission ineffective.

There is no evidence that the Viet Cong or the North Vietnamese would agree to any such procedure to cover troop withdrawals.

Pompidou Opposed

Pohar May Join Election Race

PARIS (UPI) — Interim President Alain Pohar said Wednesday he may oppose former premier Georges Pompidou in the French presidential election next month. Political experts said Pohar would pose a serious threat to the Gaullist candidate.

"I am in no way a candidate," Pohar said. "I do not want to be one but I may be obliged to be one."

Pohar's aides predicted he will join the race before the end of the week.

Pohar-for-candidate committees cropped up across the country. A number of influential middle-of-the-road leaders called on Pohar, former senate president, to run.

Political experts said that if Pohar joins the race he will be a serious threat to Pompidou, who so far leads the field of contenders.

The experts said Pohar's candidacy might force Pompidou, 57, into a runoff after the first round of voting June 1.

A second round of voting will be held June 15 if no candidate gets an absolute majority.

Pohar, who moved Monday into the Elysee Palace occupied for 10 years by former president Charles de Gaulle, discussed his plans with Jean Lecanuet, president of the democratic Centre group, and other middle-road leaders Wednesday.

Hopeless Quest?

GENERAL ALFRED JODL reluctantly agreed to accept a demand for unconditional surrender when he met General Dwight Eisenhower and other allied commanders at Reims, early in the morning of May 7. And at midnight of May 8 the Second World War was officially at an end. That was just 24 years ago.

The cost of that conflict in human suffering can never be counted. The figure of more than 50 million dead, wounded and missing provides some measure of the horror.

For all the striving of dedicated men and women the world still cannot find the way to security, and misguided leaders still accept the dreadful risks that even little wars entail.

The tragedy is that humanity has the means for enforcing peace upon the nations. All that is required is agreement among the great powers — indeed, between only two of them, the Soviet Union and the United States — to engage such massive pressures as to discourage any belligerent. But between them there must be trust, and that apparently is a commodity beyond their reach.

The world has watched, in helplessness that is apt to breed indifference, the futile manoeuvres of governments to bring an end to such miseries as Nigeria's civil war. The suspicion must grow that the peacemaking effort is lacking in sincerity. There are too many selfish interests involved, too many jealousies, too many rivalries.

The nations cannot find a formula for a settlement of the Middle East's continuing crisis, but it is not an impossible assignment had they the will to sink their various differences, political or otherwise, and use their wealth and strength to end the Israeli-Arab confrontation.

There is no threat to peace anywhere which cannot be overcome provided mutual confidence can be achieved between the great powers. To find that confidence they must first escape from fear.

They would be taking a great stride in the direction of full world security if they could agree only on such a problem as that posed in Nigeria, for once they have experienced the success their harmonious relationship can accomplish they would, surely, be loath to destroy it.

On this anniversary of the signing of the peace in Reims, world leaders should look back at the ruin of that time and remind themselves that the chaos and torture of another such disaster would be infinitely worse.

Liquor Study

OPPOSITION LEADER Tom Berger's call for the disbanding of the three-man royal commission on liquor in British Columbia seems to miss an essential point about commission inquiries. This is that commissions make recommendations, and governments make the decisions — even if the decision is sometimes to take the recommendations under "consideration" indefinitely.

Mr. Berger's complaint is that it would be a mistake to allow a commission consisting of a judge, a clergyman and a teetotaler to recommend what kind of liquor laws the province should have, when the elected representatives of the people could make up their own minds. The answer is that the elected representatives of the people will make up their own minds.

But first it is as well that they should have before them the facts, the opinions and the suggestions evoked from all interested parts of British Columbia society by the inquiry, and the reasoned conclusions the commission draws.

A judge, a clergyman and a teetotaler may not, as Mr. Berger asserts, be representative of the people of British Columbia. Neither, it might be noted, is he. But this is immaterial.

The simple fact is that the royal commission study will be a valuable aid to the government in deciding on the reforms to be undertaken. But there will be nothing binding about its recommendations.

Longer or Shorter

CANADA'S REPRESENTATION commissioner, Mr. Nelson Castonguay, reported several months ago that the Australian system of compulsory, continuously revised voters' lists could be adapted to Canadian use. This system would replace the current method of drawing up the federal voters' lists by a hurried door-to-door canvass a few weeks before election day.

The advantages of the Australian-type lists, Mr. Castonguay said after a two-year study designed to find out if Canada could reduce the length of election campaigns and increase the voter turnout through improvements in registration and absentee balloting, would be that an estimated 1,000,000 more electors would be able to vote, and that the election campaign time could be cut in half, from 60 to 30 days.

The disadvantage would be the cost. Mr. Castonguay reckoned that in place of the present permanent electoral staff of 22 persons, 600 or 700 would be needed. Such a large number would be required to collect more than 11,000,000 signatures on voters' cards to be filed in Ottawa and in the federal constituencies, and to keep the cards up to date continuously.

The representation commissioner now appears to be looking in the other direction in respect to the length of campaigns. Last week he told the House of Commons privileges and elections committee that another 10 days could well be added to the usual 60-day preparation period for a general election. Modern communications make quick elections possible in the big urban centres, Mr. Castonguay said, but more time is needed in rural constituencies to prepare the lists, nominate candidates and print ballot papers. Another week or so would enable voters' lists to be more complete.

But if the Canadian public were to have its way, one is apt to think that it would choose the permanent lists and the short campaigns — and hang the additional expense of a few million dollars a year. As The Globe and Mail remarked when Mr. Castonguay reported on the feasibility of the Australian system, "... everything about elections is expensive — particularly their duration. Elimination of the wear and tear of 30 days of unnecessary campaigning is a prize worth almost any price." The more so, perhaps, because Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is among the political figures on record as holding that the major share of the parties' election campaign costs should be borne by the state.

Here May Be Born the Planetary People Whose Loyalties Lie Beyond Continents

As you fly in to Geneva, they are separated from each other and piped from the machine — a burst of k-messons, bare, or rho-messons there, and so on — to the huge experimental halls where the scientists wait for them with their measuring instruments. These wisps of elemental matter streaking from the machine must be, weight for weight, the most expensive artefacts ever created by man. They are so precious that their source can be allowed to dry up only when it has to be serviced. So the Big Machine works round the clock and physicists will cross the world, work through the night, interrupt holidays, and even in one case postpone marriage for the privilege of a few stridently-rattled hours "on the machine."

No layman can fail to be deeply impressed, if rather baffled by all this, CERN is a place of fantastic contrasts of size and minuteness, incredible energies and unimaginable delicacy, of hard technical practicality and the softest of human touches. The only tangible products of this massive piece of technology are photographs recording in squiggly lines the births and deaths of particles that live for only millionths or billionths of a second. And the final outputs of this huge research factory, employing more than 3,000 people, are just letters and numbers: arcane equations printed on bits of paper which only a few hundred people in the world fully understand but which may, one day, suddenly clear into a simple, deep understanding of matter that the schoolboys of AD 2000 will read about in their books. That's what the CERN men hope, and why they drive themselves on in the search.

You can't spend a day or two here without sniffing an exhilarating tang of ideas in the air, a sort of ozone mixture that start your mental spark-plugs firing furiously. And then you start wondering how this atmosphere can be made to spread to the world outside, where it is sorely needed, or — awful thought — whether it can exist only in the cluttered walls of "high science."

One ingredient of this heady mixture is the spirit of friendly rivalry. In this kind of science you really do find that two teams racing each other to the same goal — the discovery of some new particle, say, or completion of the biggest machine — will help each other all the way. Even though the highest honors will go to the team that gets there first, both "sides" take pride in the fact that getting there is the most important thing of all. It's not always like this in science, and there are disturbing signs that as the military and industrial hold on to traditionally "open" university science grows, secrecy and tight-lipped competition are growing. But at least it does happen often — in sharp contrast to the business world, where success usually depends on playing it close to the chest — and when it doesn't happen scientists get deeply upset about it.

Another potent ingredient of the CERN atmosphere is the conviction that science can smash down national and political differences. In Jungk's words: "CERN might today well be the place where one can find the first Planetarians, earth-dwellers who no longer feel loyalty to a single nation, a single continent, or a single political creed, but to the common knowledge that they advance together."

Little Stories from Prague Illustrate New Attitudes

By NEAL ASCHERSON

controls national behavior. There must be a guiding hand to prevent "other forces" — of Right or Left — grabbing the handles of public opinion, and Dr. Husak intends the hand to be his.

So far, however, the Pragueers do not feel they know how far all this represents what Dr. Gustav Husak, the new Czechoslovak Communist Party leader, thinks. They know he is highly intelligent ("the first egghead ever to come to power in a Communist society") and that he is no Soviet puppet. But they are not sure how far his stringent control of the press, for instance, is expediency in a crisis moment or authentic Husak.

Husak owes much to the press and its courage. In the early 1960s, after Husak's release from prison, but while he was still an "unperson" in Slovakia, working as a storeman, one editor, Pavel Stevcek, took great risks and defied the censor repeatedly to give Husak space. Yet "the little doctor" is not sentimental about old friends. A few months ago in the Slovak Central Committee he attacked Stevcek for being a habitual oppositofist and troublemaker. In fact, Stevcek is doing now what he did then — writing with a boldness and bite which upsets the authorities. It is not he who has changed.

Unlike most Slovaks, Husak does not drink nor apparently does he go much to the theatre or the opera. He reads widely, and two of his oldest friends, Laco Novomesky and Okaly, are politician-writers.

But the key to his attitude to press control may lie in the years of his imprisonment. There, his old prison-mates say, he and his colleagues experienced the contempt and hatred of a public which had swallowed the absurd accusations against them as their face value. To Gustav Husak the lesson was that people are tragically gullible. Who controls the mass media — and someone will —

Rumors of Battle Behind the Scenes

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

SOMETHING is happening on Parliament Hill to the federal power structure.

The basic political clout, the ultimate authority in decision-making, is changing hands.

After the long years of submission and retreat before the increasing encroachment of the senior civil service, the parliamentarians are not just making a firm stand. They are even counter-marching.

The bureaucratic take-over of much of the real power of Parliament began as far back as the Mackenzie King years when Munitions and Supply Minister C. D. "Trader" Howe brought a horde of Doherty-Men to Ottawa in the war years.

Taking their cue from "boss Howe" who always was impatient of the slow, deliberative stance of Parliament, they set the style and pace of government.

Policies were set, decisions made by Mr. Howe's technocrats, and the most Parliament got to do a lot of the time was to rubber-stamp its approval.

When the war began, there were only 46,106 civil servants on the federal payroll.

When it ended there were 112,658.

And most of the newcomers to the federal corridors of power followed the lead in administrative thinking of Mr. Howe and his executive elite.

They founded a dynasty of power, based on the fundamental article of bureaucratic faith: that the deputy minister, like mother, knows best.

Often the minister, and almost always the less excited parliamentarian, was like a poor put-upon father, grudgingly tolerated as a not always entirely necessary nuisance.

And that's the way it has been in the years since, as the mother-knows-best bureaucracy has increased more than eight-fold, from the 46,000 at war's outbreak to 369,000 now.

Much of the time, the mandarins of the senior civil service made many of the decisions directly or, at least, influenced their ministers into making them.

Some of the mandarins still at the top were there, or well on their way to the civil service summit in Mackenzie King's days.

Prime Minister St. Laurent went quietly and appreciatively along with them as they consolidated and built their empires, from the 112,658 at war's end to 310,839 just before the political explosion of the pipeline blew him, Mr. Howe, and the Liberals from power.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker briefly challenged their supremacy, with Trade Minister Gordon Churchill forcing the resignation of "Trader" Howe's own "man," Mitchell Sharp.

But Dief, badly burned in the bureaucratic backfire, quickly backed off and lived in a sort of armed truce with them — while, to hear the Conservatives still in the empire-builders' unadmitted his administration.

They came to what was to be their apogee of power with former deputy minister Lester Pearson as their leader and prime minister, with seven others from their ranks in his cabinet.

But now the sun could be setting on their empire.

Dusk began falling when, turning his back and closing his eyes on their power elite, the ex-empire-builders in the external affairs department, Prime Minister Trudeau made up his own mind on the NATO issue.

Call him wrong on NATO. Call him anything, but don't call him the viceroy or front man for the mandarins.

Next, whisper Trudeau's Men Friday, he'll take on the high civil service establishment in the finance department and the bureaucrats who manipulate the levers of power in the many federal welfare agencies.

The prime minister publicly has sworn to recapture the real power — the supreme authority of policy and decision-making — from the bureaucracy and restore it to Parliament.

With him all the way — and even perhaps a little further — is his justice minister, John Turner.

Turner has committed the original sin in the eyes of the mandarins of the civil service empire in saying that more of its rulers must come from the political side of the power fence and fewer from the bureaucracy.

"We met a man in a train and gave him a filter-polite cigarette. He was polite, but he ripped the filter off — he said it was an extravagance. He told us his story. Father and brother killed in the war, mother simply disappeared. For years he was in a wandering band of orphan children living off the land. Now he has a job in a factory. He told us he was happy. He said: 'Everything is good in our country, there is no war, and the officials are no longer in the land.'"

"And this," the dancer went on, "is what all the ordinary Russians said: 'It is peace. The Germans have gone, what more do we need?' For us Czechoslovaks, and perhaps for you too, this passive contentedness is the most formidable fact of all."

Washington Caution

Policy Pattern Emerges

By MARK FRANKLAND
from Bangkok

THE pattern for a continuing American involvement in Southeast Asia following settlement of the Vietnam war is already being set in Thailand.

Its success depends on staying so low key that it causes no political tremors back in the United States and yet, arm enough to seem worthwhile to Asian leaders fearful of China.

The best way to observe this pattern is to travel to Bangkok from Saigon via the Laotian capital of Vientiane. In Saigon the agonies of an American involvement with all the stops pulled out are dearly familiar.

By comparison the American presence in Laos seems small, but that is partly because Laos, with fewer than three million inhabitants, is so small. Yet America underpins with men and money the whole government of Laos. Its bombs and Special Forces fight a large part of Vietnam's war. This is an equally intolerable situation in the long run, for America cannot publicly admit most of her activities in Laos, and yet with the Laotian government so fragile there is no way to end them.

In Thailand it is completely different. Although the country has a Communist insurgency problem that shows no sign of going away, the Americans have no intention of getting directly involved themselves in fighting it. And though a large part of American aid to Thailand (nearly $47 million last year) is one way or another directed against the insurgency, the rule now is that no Americans should get mixed up in the actual fighting.

The American operation in Thailand shows a considerable adjustment in fundamental political attitudes towards Washington's alliances in this part of the world. American policy here is based on the belief that Thailand, unlike South Vietnam or Laos, is a strong country. Never colonized, in spite of the best efforts of the French and British a hundred years ago, the Thai government has none of those post-colonial hangups that make dealing with the Vietnamese so difficult. It has an elaborate system which has been to some extent modernized by the efforts of the Thais themselves. It is very largely a united country in its culture and religion.

The acceptance of these strengths, however, demands that Washington does not try to impose its own moral and political standards on the Thais. Thailand is profoundly "underdeveloped." Social justice, it has an understood in the West, does not abound. While mountains play in the foyers of the luxury hotels to the profit of the members of the Thai ruling class who own them, the poor people of Bangkok (let alone the drought-plagued peasants of the Northeast) year after year go short of water.

But over-all there is the understanding taking shape that Thais must do things their own way, however inefficient or even downright objectionable by American standards. The same thinking could be applied to Malaysia, Indonesia or any other country in this area which America would like to see stand fast against Communist penetration.

Implicit in this is a lowering of the moral sights of American diplomacy, which if developed could cut back the hypocrisy that has plagued American's search for Asian allies against communism in the past. American liberals may object but it is a policy that should keep the American taxpayer and parents of American soldiers far happier.

Valuable, Disloyal Sinkiang Peking's Biggest Headache

By ROBERT S. ELEGANT, from Hong Kong

Sinkiang in far Northwest China has been a cauldron of violence and intrigue and a constant worry to Peking, 1,500 miles away, throughout this century.

But rarely has Sinkiang worried Peking more than it does today. With Sino-Soviet tensions erupting Sinkiang is an extremely valuable prize lying at Moscow's fingertips.

Called Sinkiang, the New Dominion, because it was not joined to China until the 18th century, the huge area is a treasure house of natural resources jutting into Soviet Central Asia.

It is vulnerable not only geographically, but because its volatile mixture of races, which invites Russian meddling, also made it the most obdurate province during the great proletarian cultural revolution.

Sinkiang is, in one sense, ultra-modern. Across its 636,000 square miles are dispersed oil fields, uranium mines and processing plants and nuclear-rocketry testing ranges.

The only province in which the cultural revolution was officially suspended for a time, Sinkiang also was the last to announce formation of a provincial revolutionary committee. Jerry-built administrative organs seek to rule in place of the disintegrated apparatus of the Communist Party.

The facade of local revolutionary committees has been erected everywhere else in China. But only now are those facades being raised in the major towns of Sinkiang.

The trouble with Sinkiang is that it is not really Chinese at all. It remains, as it has for centuries, foreign territory under military colonization. The Chinese genius for assimilating minority races and cultures has failed, largely because there have been so few Chinese in the New Dominion.

In China proper, the Liberation Army now behaves like an occupation force, directing all vital economic and political functions to suppress disorder. But in Sinkiang, the Liberation Army is the Chinese presence itself.

Moreover, the army units, primarily labor troops exiled for political errors, are driven by the cumulative bitterness of the cultural revolution.

The vast province, about one-sixth of the total area of the Peoples Republic of China, has a population of approximately 8,000,000.

Sinkiang evokes Soviet

Between 40 and 45 per cent are Chinese, almost all recent, involuntary exiles civilian or military. Its alien character is attested not only the official name, the Sinkiang-Uighur Autonomous Region, but by the strange configuration of its borders.

Sinkiang's boundaries with foreign territory are actually longer than those abutting Chinese-ruled territory: 3,000 miles in all, about 2,300 miles with Soviet Central Asia and Moscow-controlled Outer Mongolia, plus 700 with Afghanistan, Pakistan and India, compared with 1,500 miles with China's Chinghai and Kansu provinces and the Tibetan Autonomous Region.

The obvious vulnerability of that exposed position is increased by sparse population and difficult communications.

The capital, Tushu, also called Urumchi, is linked to Lanchow, the main nuclear weapon-producing centre in Kansu province, by a single-tracked railroad. Spurs extend to the oil centre at Karamai to the north and to Taingho in the south.

Projected links to the Trans-Siberian railroad were left uncompleted because of deteriorating Moscow-Peking relations.

The diversity of terrain — mountains, deserts, oases and small fertile basins — is matched by the racial diversity of a largely nomadic, pastoral population.

Chief among them — perhaps 70 per cent — are the various Uighurs. Tajiks, Uzbeks, Mongols and Tartars have closer emotional, economic and social ties with their brethren across Soviet borders than with their Chinese overlords. The larger Moslem population has periodically rebelled against the Chinese.

New Dominion has attracted Russian ambition since the time of the czars; Russian subversion, intensified after the Sino-Soviet quarrel became public in 1960, Sinkiang evokes Soviet greed because it is rich in uranium. At least three significant deposits are worked: one in the southwest at Puli, a second in the west near Paicheng and a third in the northeast near Yushu.

In addition the new city of Shihhotze in the Dzungaria basin in the north reportedly is built around a plant that refines uranium ore for shipment to Lanchow.

Besides possessing one of China's three major oil fields, the Karamai (black sand) field in the extreme north near the Soviet border, Sinkiang is rich in other minerals.

Finally — and, perhaps, most important — the New Dominion's vast empty stretches contain China's nuclear and rocket testing ranges. Originally placed in Central Asia for security from American power, they are now highly vulnerable to Russian attack. Reports indicate that the Chinese have now created an alternate missile proving ground at Hotien in the south.

Because of its barren character and vast expanse, the New Dominion is only sparsely defended against the attacks the Russians would mount if they came into large-scale conflict with China.

Moscow could easily crush

China's nuclear power drive. Cutting off uranium supplies would end weapons production.

Nowhere else is China quite so vulnerable. Yet her defences have been ravaged by the cultural revolution and the alienation of both Chinese settlers and minority natives by communist repression.

About 400,000 to 500,000 troops are stationed in Sinkiang, but they are divided into two quite distinct groups.

North of the Mountains of Heaven, the Sinkiang military region headquarters at Urumchi commands the front-line troops that would bear the brunt of a Russian attack from the north. South of that range, troops guarding the western and southern frontiers are commanded directly from Liberation Army headquarters in Peking.

Most units still are committed to General Wang En-mao, commander since 1957.

Wang is by no means a spent force in Sinkiang, though he has been alternately denounced and reinstated by the cultural revolution — and now apparently lives in Peking curiously suspended between disgrace and favor.

The habit of stationing troops in a single area for decades has made Wang En-mao a power with whom Peking still must reckon if it is to control and defend the New Dominion.

About 10 divisions, somewhat more than 100,000 men, are frontline combat troops. In addition to service units, they are supported by a single "division" of the Chinese air force, which may have as many as 400 aircraft, chiefly fighters.

The remainder of the troops are in the same anomalous status as the approximately 2,000,000 young men and women, chiefly from the Shanghai region, who were involuntarily resettled in Sinkiang "to open the frontier regions."

Like those civilians, the troops of the production and construction corps are essentially unsympathetic to the regime.

Although notably unenthusiastic, they are Chinese and would respond to an attack. But how effective would they be?

Sinkiang is, after all, China's Siberia. Neither the prisoners undergoing "reform through labor" nor their guards are in high favor.

Because of all the complex factors — geographic, demographic and political — Sinkiang evaded much of the rigors of the cultural revolution. For the same reasons, Wang En-mao could act as spokesman of the moderate generals from his secure base.

Things now are changing. Peking is attempting to assert its authority, as much because of fear of the Soviet Union as because of its largely frustrated determination to bring the entire country under control.

Wang En-mao may be badly needed again — if Russian subversion intensifies.

Eskimos Patronized?

By DENNIS BRAITHEWAITE

What conceivable purpose was served by the recent "royal" tour of the Northwest Territories?

The Eskimos are said to be baffled by the whole idea of governor general. He isn't part of the government, he has no real authority over them or anyone else, he doesn't even dress like a Very Important Person.

Yet, they were told there was something significant in his visit and they should wash their faces, comb their hair and at the right moment go into their dance.

Talk about remnants of colonialism. Here we are faced with the real and growing discontent of our native Indians and Eskimos, expressed in a reasonable demand that they be treated not as backward children, indigents or supplicants, but as Canadians of the first class with the same rights and privileges as the rest of us.

Above all, they ask that we discard the outmoded and demeaning idea that they are heathens or noble savages.

But this is the very thing the viceregal tour does; it patronizes the Eskimos by offering them a Great White Father image that comes down from the sky in a giant silver bird, bearing colored beads, tobacco, prayer books and, if they're lucky, a little firewater.

By appearing before them, not in ermine robes and a crown but wearing the latest thing in nylon parka-over-thermal-underwear, this very model of a modern governor general only confuses the natives and makes them nervous.

The government is obviously tussling with the problem of what to do about the governor general. Since authentic royal tours of Canada are now out of the question — after that bad scene in Quebec last time — the theory has been advanced that the Queen's representative should quietly take on this and other monarchical tasks, so as to placate the ruffled royals without running the risk of another cold shoulder or worse, a hot confrontation in Quebec.

But the WASPs aren't that easily mollified. A governor general's tour of, say, Oakville, wouldn't do at all. Real monarchists won't settle for less than the real thing.

The governor general's Caribbean tour was clearly a kind of dry run to get the bugs out of the new routine. Its lack of success as a reminder of Commonwealth solidarity can be judged by Anguilla's subsequent small war of liberation against all things British.

Then someone got the idea of treating Canada's remote areas and its native peoples as outposts of Imperial Ottawa to be favored from time to time with the viceregal presence.

The ill-starred flight to Baffin Land was the first fruit of this inspiration and although it's still too early to write the thing off as a flop, it is safe to say that the results have not fulfilled the initial hopes of its organizers.

Faced with Quebec's hostility, Eskimo indifference and the Anglo's perturbation, the governor general may be driven to advertise:

Have sceptre, will travel.

"Remember that suicide letter he was writing when you were last here..."

Economy Advancing In Most B.C. Sectors

The provincial economy is making rapid advances in practically all sectors during the first part of 1969, Trade Minister, Weldon Skellings said Wednesday.

Among indicators of steady growth were two major ones: Pacific Great Eastern railway carloadings for the first quarter were running almost 10 per cent ahead of 1968 and the $5,000,000 first stage of the Roberts Bank superport had been completed, the minister said.

The assessment of the provincial economy was contained in the government's regular monthly summary of business activity.

Mrs. Skellings said the forest industry was recovering quickly from an unusually severe winter on the Coast. The Interior timber scale for February was 25.3 per cent greater than the same month in 1968, and the total Coast and Interior timber scale for February was up by more than 5 per cent.

HIGH LEVEL

The mining industry maintained high levels of production through the early part of this year, and the minister added that the growth trend for the remainder of 1969 and beyond was favorable.

January zinc shipments rose 97 per cent; copper, 42 per cent; molybdenum, 52 per cent; and shipments of iron concentrates increased by 37 per cent over the same month last year.

Mr. Skellings said the forest industry was recovering quickly from an unusually severe winter Corporation that it had sold its production for the next 12 years to Japanese interests, as evidence of the industry's continuing vigor.

Exports from B.C. ports in January were up 9 per cent over the first month in 1968, while imports, bolstered by a much larger than average number of civil aircraft and parts, jumped 40 per cent during the same period.

Mr. Skellings said further evidence of the buoyant state of the economy was provided by provincial labor force figures. The labor force by March last had grown by 27,000 during a 12-month period, while at the same time, with an unemployment rate of 5.5 per cent, 7,000 fewer were unemployed.

Air Canada Workers

Many Feeling the Pinch

MONTREAL (CP)—Air Canada employees laid off when the International Association of Machinists went on strike more than two weeks ago are beginning to feel the pinch.

"Our money is running out," says Odette Hamel, one of 750 stewardesses laid off in Montreal.

About 20 per cent of the Air Canada stewardesses have found temporary jobs in offices, restaurants and hospitals and with other airlines.

Those with nursing degrees have "found it easy to get temporary jobs," Miss Hamel said in an interview.

Miss Hamel said she will have to find temporary employment if the strike continues much longer.

She has applied for unemployment insurance "but none of us has had any payments yet."

Dan Morey, an Air Canada passenger agent at Montreal International airport, said his family is better off than most because "we had savings."

With the strike, the family of five has had to reduce its food and living costs, cancel a planned summer holiday and spend money set aside for a new house.

CP RAIL APPOINTMENTS

S. M. GOSSAGE J. M. ROBERTS D. M. DUNLOP

The appointment of S. M. Gossage, vice-president, Canadian Pacific, as the senior executive officer responsible for the overall operation of CP Rail, is announced by Ian D. Sinclair, president of Canadian Pacific. The appointment follows the establishment on May 1 of CP Rail as a separate operating entity within the Canadian Pacific corporate group. To achieve closer co-ordination of operating, marketing and sales functions, J. M. Roberts, vice-president, marketing and sales, CP Rail, and D. M. Dunlop, vice-president, operations and maintenance, CP Rail, will report directly to Mr. Gossage. The new management structure is designed to increase CP Rail's flexibility in anticipating and meeting customer requirements.

Arctic News Heats Up Exchanges

Business Topics By Harry Young

The Canadian stock market has been posting itself during the past few months for a great explosion of oil shares interest. If this summer's exploration for petroleum products in the Arctic bears fruit, the market could be a different story.

Only a few days after the Panarctic consortium got to work drilling, the news flowed south Wednesday that the first well drilled gave a showing of natural gas at Drake Point, on Melville Island, one of the larger and more northerly of Canada's Arctic Islands.

BIG GROUP

Dome Petroleum is the operator for the group that includes some 15 Canadian exploration companies as well as the Canadian government.

Jack Gallagher, president of Dome-Petroleum, merely said presence of hydrocarbons had been found, but he was unwilling to say at this stage whether a natural gas find at that high latitude could be termed a commercial proposition. He added that at present there was no way of estimating the quantity.

OIL FIND

If it had been an oil find it might have been different, but even though natural gas may be a marginal operation so far as the Arctic is concerned, it is nonetheless encouraging that so early in the exploration year the presence of petroleum has been discovered.

Coming on top of news earlier this week that a U.S. company had detected oil on the Alaskan northern slope some 85 miles from the Prudhoe Bay discovery, the effect on the Canadian oil market has been electrifying.

MOST GAINING

Shares of most of the companies in the consortium have risen and gains of up to $8 a share in various issues were recorded in Toronto Stock Exchange trading. The oil average was up more than 10 points for the second day in succession, and now is at an all-time high.

Some of the day's big gains were in Dome Petroleum — up $5 — Home Oil, Cominco, Bow Valley, West Coast Production, Great Plains, Canadian Export Oil, Prairie Oil, Canadian Southern and Canadian Hydrocarbons.

The successful well was drilled on a farmout to Petro-Canada from a group in which Prairie Oil has an interest.

SA HOLDS GOLD

Expectations that the price of gold may be increased as a result of new currency uncertainties in Europe is causing South Africa to sit closely on its pile.

The world's largest gold producing country has holdings of gold and foreign currencies of $1,416,000,000 (U.S.) or 1,003,000,000 rand. It is the first time the reserves have topped the billion-rand mark.

By withholding its new gold from the market, South Africa can play an important part in setting the pattern for the various European gold markets.

MORE COAL FOR JAPAN

An extra 500,000 tons of coal has been sold to Japanese steel interests by McIntyre Porcupine from its Smoky River deposits in Alberta.

The company says it will start shipping the coal next February and that the contract is in addition to the 22,500,000-ton contract already arranged, and which is to begin in the middle of 1970 for shipment over a period of 15 years.

NORANDA RESULTS

Net profit of Noranda mines for the first three months was $13,665,000 (57 cents a share) compared with $13,144,000 (55 cents) in the corresponding quarter of 1968.

Copper prices were lower than a year ago, said the company, although it expected the over-all 1969 copper price average to be similar to that of 1968.

OPR MAKES LESS

More difficult winter operating conditions caused a drop in Canadian Pacific Railway profits in the first quarter.

Net earnings of $9,983,000 (57 cents a share) were down from $11,493,000 (41.16) in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

Is tobacco a bad word like marijuana or opium?

Shareholders of American Tobacco have just changed the name of the company to American Brands Inc.

Tobacco is out of the title because, it is explained, recent acquisitions have made the company a producer of such things as snack foods, apple sauce and hard liquors. The change covers the diversification angle.

advertising contracts. However it will honor contracts already signed. But when these run out that will be the end.

The move had been under consideration for two or three years, one CBC source said. It was an accumulation of things that finally brought it to a head. These include the way the board of directors felt, the public mood and other factors.

Tobacco manufacturers were not consulted by the board prior to the move.

MATHER PLEASED

Barry Mather, the NDP member of Parliament for Surrey who has conducted a decade-long anti-smoking campaign, said it was an "excellent" decision.

"It sets a great example for the other news media," he said.

"Maybe the CTV private network would consider following suit." He said the CBC's tobacco ad revenues were only a small percentage of their total ad revenue. It can easily be made up from other sponsors.

The Commons health committee, to which Davidson referred in his statement, is in the midst of a months-long inquiry into the smoking habit. Mather hopes their report will be ready later this spring.

Wilmat Tennyson, vice-president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., said in Toronto that "Rothmans has no comment whatsoever."

A spokesman for CTV said the matter is "under study and close review" by the network. He declined further comment.

In Montreal, a spokesman for Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Ltd. said the CBC's action was a "surprise," since the corporation had presented what he termed a "neutral" brief to the health committee.

He said that both the CBC and tobacco manufacturers adhere to an advertising code and manufacturers do not request advertising time before 9 p.m.

But he added, "It's a free country," and the CBC could do what it wished with its advertising time.

Paul Paire, president of Imperial Tobacco, said:

"We are surprised. We are being pre-judged before having a chance to be heard."

The tobacco manufacturers are scheduled to appear at the health committee's hearings in June, the company spokesman said.

Mark in Demand

thinks a revaluation of the mark is not necessary at the moment. The speculative rush in Frankfurt on Wednesday, which was not reflected on all other markets, was still well below the worst of the November crisis when the franc came under tremendous pressure.

In the first week of November some $750,000,000 worth of "hot money" flowed into West Germany in the hope of an upward revaluation of the mark. This swelled to $1,200,000,000 in the second week with a fantastic $350,000,000 on the peak day of Nov. 15.

Since the latest run on the mark started 10 days ago with the resignation of Charles de Gaulle as president of France, the West German federal bank has bought an estimated $1,000,000,000, financial sources in Frankfurt said.

SWISS NERVOUS

In Zurich, Switzerland, dealers described the foreign exchange market as nervous and hectic with a heavy demand for marks dominating trading.

After pushing through its dollar ceiling early in trading on the Swiss market, the mark remained strong throughout dealings, to close at 3.970-30 compared with a final rate of 3.9700-10 Tuesday night.

Swiss dealers said there was concern at the disparity between the actual rate and the official ceiling, but the approach of this weekend's monthly central bankers' meeting at the Bank for International Settlements in Basel was not a market factor, they believed.

Mike Pitchford, chief union negotiator, said that any agreement arrived at with Air Canada would be used as a bargaining point in talks with Canadian Pacific Airlines with which the union also has a labor dispute.

Earlier Wednesday, the seven Air Canada representatives and the 15 union representatives met in a 15-minute session.

Rygas said at the time that it was decided to adjourn to permit both sides time "to consider procedures" decide what items should be dealt with first.

The strike has grounded the airline's 108-plane fleet since April 20.

In Ottawa both sides were warned by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey Wednesday they can look forward to a long strike if negotiations do not work out.

LONDON (UPI) — British officials engaged in heated talks Wednesday with Premier Robert Bradshaw in an unsuccessful attempt to persuade him to release Anguilla from his Caribbean Island Federation.

Caribbean diplomats said the talks developed into a "furious tug-of-war" between Bradshaw and his deputy premier Paul Southwell on the one hand and Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary Michael Stewart and Undersecretary William Whitlock on the other.

Both sides refused comment. The British are attempting to persuade Bradshaw to agree to detaching Anguilla from the associated state of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla.

Before leaving Basseterre, his capital, Bradshaw stated: "Anguilla will continue to remain an integral part of the state and my government will not decide otherwise."

And in London he told newsmen: "This is primarily a matter for my government and Her Majesty's government."

Bus Strike at Any Time

'Requirement Work' Hits Ferries Friday

Fun in Sun Serious Affair

Denise Thomas, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Thomas of 1863 Feltham, and Dean Whitehead, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs.

David Whitehead of 3969 Lexington, play it cool on Willows Beach.—(William Boucher)

Dogs, Walker Enjoy Beach Breeze

Twenty-year record high temperature of 75 in Victoria sent residents to beaches for cool breezes. Judy Soper, 19, of 1520 Gladstone took miniature poodles Flare and Mimi along for walk on Willows Beach. Temperature in Victoria was highest for May 7 since 1949, when it hit 73. Record highs were also set in Tofino, 72; Nanaimo, 78; Abbotsford, 82, and Terrace, 70.—(Jim Ryan)

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

Union representatives indicated Wednesday night that B.C. Ferries faces a work-to-rule slowdown and Vancouver Island Coach Lines almost certainly faces a strike.

Addressing a meeting of the Victoria Labor Council, Joe Simpson, a coach driver, said a strike "could happen at any time," and there was "no doubt that it's going to happen."

Negotiations between drivers and management of Vancouver Island Coach Lines broke down April 23 and drivers are legally free to strike after May 15.

JOINT STATEMENT

A statement earlier Wednesday issued jointly by business agents for licensed and unlicensed ferry personnel said no strike was being considered "at this time" but "the feeling of ferry workers runs high, reminiscent of the days which led to the strike in 1968."

But a ferry worker told the Victoria Labor Council meeting that ferry workers would begin Friday to "work to requirement." Ed Carter told the meeting, "Mr. Bennett will get a dollar's work for a dollar's pay," but did not elaborate on what working "to requirement" entailed.

MARINE BRANCHES

The statement by Gordon Mercer and Norman Thornber, spokesmen for the marine branches of B.C. Government Employees Association, said the ferry workers were given earlier to understand that bargaining rights would be granted to them "in all matters affecting the general welfare, including wages."

The statement said that "while government has recognized wage requests presented earlier... there had been no guarantee of further increases to bring workers up to parity with non-government counterparts."

SOME CONCERN

While only one transportation system (Air Canada) has actually been stopped by a strike, the possibility of ferries and buses being curtailed has caused some concern in Victoria, which depends heavily on the services.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Clare Copeland said Wednesday it was probably too soon to comment significantly, but "if all the things that could happen do happen, we will be virtually isolated."

Talks between striking machinists of Air Canada and management began briefly Wednesday but broke down on procedural matters. Canadian Pacific Airlines machinists have called for a conciliation board to take part in their negotiations, which broke down Monday. There has been no strike vote.

MAINLAND LINE

Mr. Simpson said the Vancouver-based Pacific Stage Lines would continue its ferry runs to and from Victoria in the event of a strike by Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

But the two lines co-operate on taking passengers, each line making the last run from either city to get its buses home. This would mean that the final Vancouver-Victoria ferry at night would not have any buses, Mr. Simpson said, because this run was normally taken by the Victoria-based line.

Forces Planning Parade Floats

The Canadian Armed Forces will enter 12 floats depicting their community services May 19 in the Victoria Day parade. Cmdr. W. Bruce Wilson, commandant of the Esquimalt Fleet School, will direct the entry.

Juvenile Courts 'Too Lenient'

Frustrated Officer Resigns

By BOB PETHICK

A veteran Victoria policeman who has served the past 12 years as a juvenile officer will turn in his badge May 20 because he believes courts have been too lenient with young offenders.

Norman Galbraith, 55, announced his intentions Wednesday. He would not normally have retired for five more years.

"I'm browned off after nearly 29 years. Over the last few years there has been no satisfaction. You work on a case for a couple of months, on some youth who has given you trouble before. In a week he is out laughing at you," he said. "If I'm not getting the backing of the authorities, there's no point in my sticking around worrying about it."

He said people who handed down the rules had a lot of training in theory but no experience.

"I don't know how they set up these rules, but doing away with punishment is ridiculous," he said.

Other members of the force indicated sympathy with Mr. Galbraith's views.

"It's not that he's dissatisfied with the department," said one. "It's just that he's frustrated, having his hands tied this way. I can't say many of us blame him."

Another said the views might not have been expressed strongly enough. "Now they have a tendency toward psychiatry, saying that if a boy breaks into a house he is mentally disturbed. When you lose your temper, you are mentally disturbed, as far as I am concerned," Mr. Galbraith said. Mr. Galbraith said the decision had been a long time coming. He made up his mind about a week ago and made it public Wednesday.

"I believe in probation. Any child can get into trouble and deserve to be given a second chance. But after someone gets into trouble for the same offence three or four times, it's time to take a second look," he said.

"If someone continually gets away with something and nothing is done he is going to realize he can get away with anything," he said.

He said the age limit for juveniles should be lowered to 16, as it is in most other parts of Canada.

"If you don't know the difference between right or wrong by the time you are 16, you are too mentally disturbed to walk around loose," he said.

He said to deal with the hard core of juveniles that made up from 1 to 2 per cent of all offenders, industrial school terms or transfers to adult court should be practised more often.

"Putting these ones on the head is not doing any good," he said. Co-operation of parents could stop 75 to 80 per cent of juvenile delinquency, "but the parents are afraid all the police will do is send their kids to jail."

He and Mrs. Galbraith plan a three-month holiday, travelling and fishing. "Then I'll look for a job," he said.

Oak Bay's Watling Alone

Ratepayers Approve Highrise Legal Fight

Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association voted Wednesday night to approve their president's legal action against Oak Bay council to have quashed the recent rezoning of Victoria Riding Academy land for highrise use.

But, in the same motion, they voted not to become a party to the action and, at the same time, to allocate $100 to finance it.

President Conrad Watling told the group of about 52 members of the association, meeting in the municipal hall, that he was not "necessarily against high-rises," but was against council going against public opinion, which he said was expressed at the public hearing on rezoning of the riding academy property.

'FACTS, FIGURES'

"I am against indiscriminate zoning until given facts and figures—what it's going to produce and what it's going to cost," he said.

Earlier, he said public funds were used to buy the property for public use (parkland).

"Council is not in the real estate business, and a highrise is not public use," he said. "Who is going to make money on it? The builders and the property managers. Let council go into the real estate business, build it, rent it and make money on it."

CLEARING HOUSES

Mr. Watling said if council didn't use the property for a recreation centre, he could see it going to the ratepayers and asking for money to buy property with houses on it, taking the houses off and building a recreation centre.

Opinions varied through the two-hour meeting and at one time tempers flared when Mayor Fred Hawes, speaking as a member of the association, said there had been misrepresentation on a petition. He was challenged on the statement and said he was speaking as a member and an individual, not as mayor, and that was his opinion.

The chairman, Jane Hall, was criticized by two members for trying to influence the meeting at the start of the discussion.

Several members said they didn't think she was trying to influence anybody.

The association re-elected Mr. Watling as president. Other officers elected were: Albert de Mezey, vice-president; A. R. Guy, secretary; William Barclay, treasurer; Jack Rhodes, director.

Meeting Today

Saanich Studies Business Levy

By DON GAIN

A special Saanich committee will meet at 3:30 p.m. today in the municipal hall to look at the possibility of establishing a business tax in the municipality.

Committee chairman Ald. Leslie Passmore said Wednesday that no decision had been made as yet.

"We have been told by the provincial government on different occasions that all municipalities should make available for themselves any revenue it is possible to get. We do not have and never have had a business tax."

Victoria is the only municipality in Greater Victoria which imposes a business tax. It is necessary in Saanich however, to buy a business licence.

Licensing inspector Roy Wooten said Wednesday that the tax, if imposed, would affect about 250 businesses.

He said the cost of a licence, bought in January, would be deducted from the business tax, payable in July. In effect, the business would pay whichever was the larger of the two.

RENTAL VALUE

Licences are figured on factors like floor area, the number of employees or the number of chairs in a barber shop, he said. The business tax would be figured on the rental value of the premises.

He said Victoria charged 6.25 per cent of this value for business tax purposes, "but we would recommend only 6 per cent."

Today's meeting will be the first full meeting of the special business tax committee. A committee was constituted last year to look into the possibilities of such a tax but no action was taken.

It was suggested at recent budget-paring sessions that the business tax idea should be revived.

Punkin's Dual Life No Secret

The secret of Punkin's double life is out, and it turns out to be pretty tame.

Punkin, a two-year-old orange Persian cat owned by the E. M. King family of 3391 Woodburn, had his picture in the Colonist Wednesday, when he returned home after being missing since last July 30.

The couple who had been caring for him during that time—Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Laurie of 1692 Alderwood—recognized his picture and called the Kings.

Mrs. Laurie said Punkin, whom they had named Thomas, adopted them during the first week of August last year. "I was out watering the flowers when I felt something brushing against my legs," she said. "I looked down and saw it was a big orange cat."

"It looked pretty scrawny, so I took it in and gave it some cheese and milk."

The Lauries then put the cat out, but when it was still there the next morning, they decided to adopt it rather than call the SPCA.

"They get so many cats," said Mrs. Laurie. "I was afraid they might just do away with it."

Thomas had a personal section of the chertfield, special food and all the attention he could want, but somehow it just wasn't enough. Last Tuesday, he left the

Canada Has Potential Champion —Just Needs New Olympic Event

When Toronto Maple Leafs sold their Victoria franchise in the Western Hockey League to Phoenix in 1967, one of the most famous names in the game returned to hockey. With the loss of professional hockey came the Junior Victoria Cougars. And while it will be some time before they can add much to the history of a name which was engraved on the Stanley Cup in 1925 and on the Governors Cup and Lester Patrick Cup after a WHL sweep in 1951, the day should come when it will be engraved on the Memorial Cup as well.

Victoria's Junior Cougars have come a fair way in their two seasons. They may still be "A" in name only but they won the British Columbia Junior Hockey League championship in their second season, swept through the league playoffs without losing a game and put up a commendable argument against the Alberta champions in Memorial Cup playdowns. It will be a number of seasons yet before anyone can reasonably expect Memorial Cup victory to be possible, but there was a vast improvement in the calibre of play and last season established Junior hockey in Victoria.

It had always seemed probable that a well-run Victoria team in a well-run junior league would have a good chance of succeeding, but when the Cougars came into existence in 1967 there was no assurance of either.

The scratch start came in August, 1967, when the Victoria Junior "A" Hockey Club was incorporated under the Companies Act. Shares were sold at $1 each with the stipulations that no one could purchase fewer than 100 shares or own more than 10 per cent of outstanding shares. The result was the sale of 6400 shares to 48 shareholders, and the club started with a bankroll of $6,400 plus several hundred dollars received as donations.

Bill Ferguson was chosen as club president, Bob Reid as managing director and Doug Anderson as coach, and in view of what has happened it seems likely that they will be asked to carry on for a third season when the club has its annual meeting later this month.

As had to be expected, the first season wasn't too successful. But it was no disaster, either. The Cougars finished last and their official paid attendance for the 20 home games was 22,946 fans, of which 7336 were young enough to be admitted at reduced prices.

It wasn't enough to match operational costs of more than $42,000, which included in addition to arena rental, coach's salary, player procurement expenses and equipment about $8,500 in travel costs.

This past season, however, brought a different story. Not only were the Cougars winners on the ice, but, because of it, they more than wiped out their first-season deficit.

Their attendance increase wasn't as large as most may have suspected with 26,559 paying customers, including 8651 at children's or student prices, for the 20 home games.

That brought about an increase of about $5,000 in ticket revenue, and there was an additional $1,500 with the Cougars' share of the National Hockey League grant to junior hockey increased to $4,500. Operational expenses were about $10,000 more than they were in the first season but playoff participation made it all add up to a profitable season.

Playoff attendance at the four league playoff games was 8486, and if anyone should wonder that league and playoff figures appear smaller than they should from announced game-by-game attendance figures, the discrepancy is because the latter figures included everyone at the game. The Cougars have been extremely generous in hosting organizations such as minor hockey groups and the school traffic patrol.

An organization which has shown a profit in its first two years and put out a product so improved in its second season that it was the best in an improved league is well on its way to a future.

"We've got to be happy with the way we've been accepted," Reid says. "We felt we would lose money the first season, hoped to break even the second season and go on from there. But we're actually ahead of the best we could have hoped to accomplish."

As for next season, the Cougars are as well off as any of their six rivals, and better off than Penitents Broncos and New Westminster Royals, clubs which face major rebuilding jobs because of the loss of players who are no longer eligible for junior hockey because of age.

The Cougars loss is not a small one, age graduation taking away Grant Evans, Adrian Blais, John Van Horick, Len Barrie and Dave Williams. But it has been minimized because the Cougars last season brought in a number of mid-level players who developed unexpectedly well in their rookie seasons.

"We are pleased with the way the Victoria-area youngsters such as Murray Kennet, Scotty Munro, Bruce Cowick and Graham Brown came along," Reid says. "They gave us a lot of bench strength this past season and should be our nucleus for the next two seasons."

All but Brown were of mid-level age last season, and Reid feels that there are two or three mid-level players in the area who will win a regular spot next season.

Reid added that the Cougars "have a line" on about eight players, mostly of mid-level age, who can help the club next season. The fact that no players can be brought in from out of province doesn't bother him at all.

"We are interested first in Island players and secondly in B.C. players," he said.

And it shouldn't be too long before enough from those two sources will be available to make the Cougars a team which will be able to compete with any junior "A" club in Canada. NHL expansion has created the chance for more players to make hockey a lucrative career, and that along with the number of ice rinks now available in the province should boost B.C. producing its share of players with a professional future.

TORONTO (CP) — The world's underwater banana eating champion is finding it easy to hold his title. Nobody wants to challenge him.

Peter Chambers of Toronto won the title a couple of weeks ago in Hamilton when he submerged in nine feet of water and downed four bananas in less than six minutes.

Since then he has been waiting by his telephone for challengers, but no one has called.

"I'll accept any challenges," he said in an interview. "I won't say no to anybody."

Chambers, a member of the Underwater Club of Canada, guzzled 38 bottles of orange pop underwater at the Canadian National exhibition last year, but fame eluded him that time.

His opportunity finally came at the Ontario Underwater Council when he agreed to compete against Bob Matheson of Hamilton in the banana eating contest.

Chambers and Matheson each wore 40 pounds of equipment, including rubber suit, weight belt, air tanks and mouthpiece, hood and mask. The water was 39 degrees.

Bananas from Panama, weighing about seven ounces each, were used for the contest.

Chambers said he had only one major problem during the competition.

"Before each peel and bite, you had to take a deep breath, remove the mouthpiece and slide the banana in. If you didn't slide it in, if you opened your mouth to bite, you'd swallow water."

Chambers was given a gold trophy, proclaiming him as the world underwater banana eating champion. He says his future plans may include the Olympics, although there's no chance that his event would ever be included.

NEW YORK (UPI) — With horses from the paddock area to the track along groomed paths in sympathy with members of the Horsemens' Benevolent and Protective Association who said the boycott was still on.

The first race had to be cancelled when groomers refused to lead the horses and one trainer was struck by stones thrown from the backstretch area. The track announced that bets made on the first race and daily double would be returned, and $184,812 in tickets were cashed in.

An announced crowd of 15,063 fans, all apparently itching for action after the loss of nine racing days, still managed to wager $747,412 after the first race.

Because of delays encountered in getting races off, the track management said that all those in attendance would be given rain checks good for admission at a future date.

Only a limited number of jockeys appeared, many calling in to say they were ill and others claiming they had riding commitments elsewhere. Track officials said enough horses had been entered for racing today.

Oriole Flight Stopped While Bosox Take Off

Baltimore Orioles who were threatening an American League flyaway while playing in their own division, are finding the so-called weaker Western Division something else.

Blanked, 1-0, Tuesday night, the Orioles took a 6-4 setback from Chicago White Sox on Wednesday.

Rookies Carlos May and Bill Melton led the 11-hit Chicago attack which produced a 6-1 lead and Bob Locker preserved the win for Gary Peters when the veteran southpaw faltered, for the second time, in the ninth inning.

BLOOPER HELPED Boston Red Sox, getting the winning run on a bloop double by Bill Thomas, took advantage of the chance to move closer by defeating Seattle Pilots, 5-4, for their fifth consecutive victory.

The Bosox are still two games away, but are all even with the Orioles on the losing side.

Washington Senators, who had been making a surprising amount of noise, also went down to their second straight defeat in the West by losing to Oakland Athletics, 4-5.

A throwing error by Del Unser in the eighth inning allowed Ted Kubiak to score the winning run.

Minnesota Twins, who had an eight-game winning streak ended Tuesday, stayed a game and a half in front of the Athletics by clobbering Cleveland Indians, 10-3.

Harmon Killebrew led the winners' 11-hit bombardment with his sixth and seventh home runs and Jim Kaat worked easily behind an early lead.

Strikeout pitching by Bob Veale of Pittsburgh Pirates and Larry Dierker of Houston Astros and the continued inability of St. Louis Cardinals to get a winning streak started featured National League play.

MOST STRIKEOUTS Dierker set the season's high of 14 strikeouts and allowed but five hits to end Philadelphia Phillies' win streak at five games with a 6-1 decision.

Dierker also scored the game's first run, singling in the fifth inning and converting the plate a few minutes later when Jim Wynn cracked out a three-run homer.

Richie Allen and Larry Hale each whiffed four times as Dierker struck out at least one of the Phillies in every inning but the fifth.

Veale didn't quite make it to the finish in a 13-strikeout, 2-0 win over San Diego Padres.

NEEDED ASSISTANCE He left with one out in the ninth inning after a double and single had put the tying runs on base. Chuck Hartenstein took over, struck out pinch-hitter Bill Davis and got pinch-hitter Al Ferrara on a fly ball.

Victory moved Pirates within two games of Chicago Cubs, who had their Eastern Division lead shaved when Los Angeles Dodgers scored three runs in the 12th inning to win, 4-2.

A two-run homer by Willie Davis capped the rally and provided what where to be the winning runs when the Cubs scored once in their half of the 12th.

A radically changed lineup brought San Francisco Giants a 5-3 decision over Cardinals, again seven games out of the lead and one notch out of the division basement only because Montreal Expos lost.

Montreal manager Gene Mauch got quite a kick out of it while his club was on its way to a 5-3 loss to Atlanta Braves.

He protested violently when a balk, which brought in the 3-3 run in the fifth inning, was called against Mike Wegener.

Mauch kicked the rosin bag twice for good distance, called for a new pitcher and then bunted the ball 40 feet into the air. He was then booted out of the game.

Victoria's Bob Burrows was drafted by Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association at the league's annual college draft on Wednesday.

Burrows, who was the most valuable player in the B.C. high school tournament in his senior year at Oak Bay, rewrote the Seattle Pacific scoring records this season and is considered a strong possibility for little All-American honors.

Cross-Country Criticism Of Stanley Cup Playoffs

By BRUCE LEVETT

Canadian Press Sports Editor

"The poor Stanley Cup. If only it could talk and say what it really thought about representing the ultimate reward of a series like that which pits the Canadians against the Blues..."

Gilles Terroux, who penned the lines for Montreal La Presse, summed up the reaction of sports writers across Canada to the present system which pits the best in the East against the best in the West in the National Hockey League playoff final.

For the second straight year, Montreal Canadiens took the measure of St. Louis Blues—the runaway winners in the West—in four straight games.

Bill Donovan of the Saint John, N.B., Telegraph-Journal, wrote:

Former Captain Joins O'Keefes

Victoria O'Keefes have added former captain Dave Stoddard to bolster their defence for Wednesday's match against West Bromwich Albion of the English League's first division.

Stoddard, a long-time Pacific Coast League standout, retired this season but has been working out regularly at the University of Victoria.

"We need someone of Dave's qualifications to back up our defence if someone should get hurt," said O'Keefe president Ron Southern.

"Right now we have nobody who can play either full back or centre half in an emergency."

O'Keefes, who meet the Mainland A's Stars at Royal Athletic Park on Saturday at 2 p.m., have already added former Victoria star Barry Sadler, who played goal for UBC Thunderbirds this season.

Tickets for the West Bromwich match are available at Memorial Arena and Price and Smith Men's Wear.

LONDON (AP) — Basil Reay, secretary of the International Lawn Tennis Federation predicted Wednesday that South Africa will be banned from the Davis Cup.

Poland and Hungary, which are scheduled to play each other in the European Zone in Warsaw this week-end, have both said they will refuse to meet South Africa in the next round because of the South African government's racial policies.

Reay said: "Countries are now objecting to South Africa's presence in the European Zone, because it is they and not South Africa who are being penalized."

The controversy has mounted with a move by Sweden to ban South Africa.

Opposition to South Africa has previously been confined to the Communist countries.

Last year Romania withdrew from the Davis Cup because it objected to playing South Africa. The Romanians were fined 25 pounds ($60), although under the tournament rules they could have been suspended.

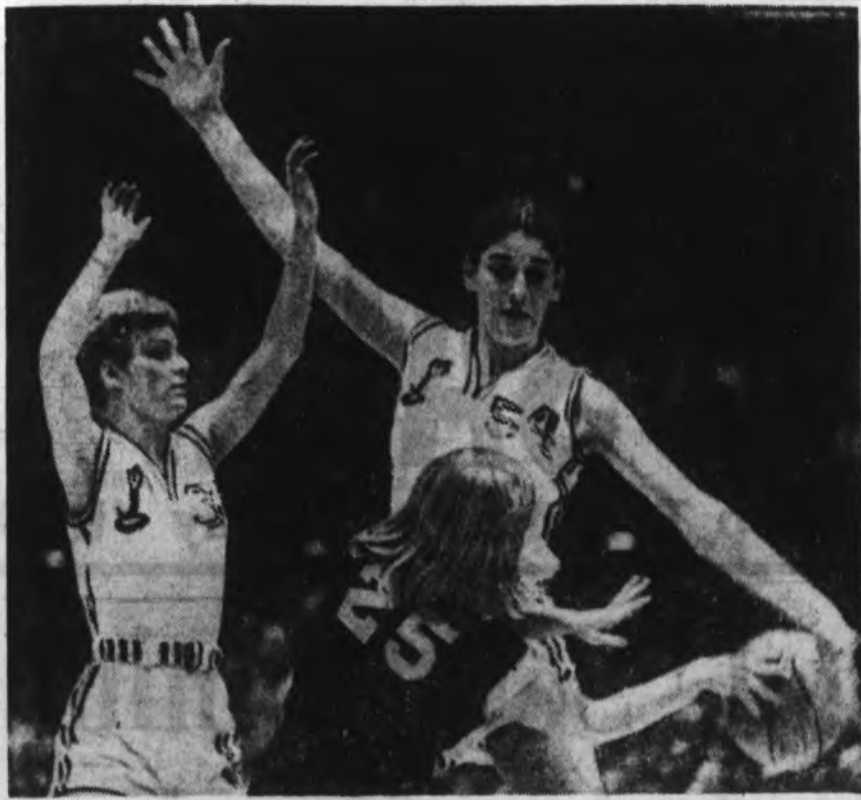

If South Africa was expelled from the ILTF, South African stars would be banned from competing on the world tournament circuit.

Such a move would require a four-fifths majority at the annual meeting of the ILTF, set for Prague next July.

Coach Quits Stampeders

CALGARY (CP) — Jerry Williams turned aside Calgary Stampeders' efforts to keep him as head coach with a legal battle Wednesday and left the Western Football Conference club so he could discuss an offer to become head coach of Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

Williams, 45, who had been denied permission by the Stampeders to talk with Philadelphia, told a tense press conference that he is exercising rights he believes he has in his four-year contract with Calgary and is terminating the pact.

Club president Gordon Burton said the Stampeders would not contest Williams' opinion.

Claims Pros Willing To Represent Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said Wednesday most of the players in the NHL would be willing to take a cut in earnings for a year to represent Canada in world competition.

FOR $10,000?

"There would have to be some sort of a fair arrangement—possibly education benefits or a payment of $10,000 for the year," he said.

Eagleson, who said his association represents all the players in the NHL, made the statement in an interview following a speech to a service club.

"All the players in the NHL with the exception of two are Canadian citizens," he said.

In his speech, Eagleson said Canada "must be careful in 1970" when the country plays host to the world amateur hockey championship.

SOUNDS WARNING

Pointing out that the International Ice Hockey Federation plans to permit a team to use up to six professionals, he said: "I... know that if we use six pros and lose, Europe will resound with the news that Canada used its professionals and still couldn't win."

Eagleson said John F. (Bumpy) Ahearne, European president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, "already is promoting the 1970 tournament as the amateurs against the pros."

He said the plan whereby Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens would each supply three players to Canada's national team was sound—provided the players selected are of top calibre.

Eagleson, as another method of helping Canada in world hockey, suggested the 12 NHL clubs should be willing to "make two men each available in August" for the national team.

"How do you convince the U.S. owners, who may not be interested in helping Canada? I don't know. But I'll tell you who definitely are interested—the players."

Professionals may be reinstated for the amateur tournament so long as it is done by Aug. 31.

The Corolla Sprinter. Pretty little car. Pretty big punch.

Every pretty little car runs well on the straight. But what happens when it meets a hill or tries overtaking? It dies. Most little cars don't have the strength to fight back, no matter how much gas you feed them.

The Sprinter packs quite a different punch. A big 60 h.p. A little brute of a power plant that will flatten hills as if they weren't there and turn overtaking from a nightmare into a dream.

And the Sprinter won't fade after the first couple of rounds. It'll take long days of hard driving in its stride.

To help back up that 60 h.p. a lolly-synchro-meshed 4 on the floor and a large double-barrelled carb are thrown in.

The Sprinter hasn't neglected the creature comforts.

They're there in plenty. Like the interior. It's built for 4 adults. Up front there are two massive bucket seats. Deep and fully contoured. And they both recline. Feeling tired? Put them back and rest in comfort. And get this, the back seat holds 2 real people, not just one with chin on knee.

To make you feel even more at home there's deep pile carpeting wall to wall, padded dash, 3 speed heater and even a tinted windshield. And if you want it, an optional automatic.

To prove that we're really talking about an economy car the Sprinter does 40 miles per gallon and will never need greasing.

The Corolla Sprinter. One pretty little car that fights back.

Silence Shocks Rescuers At Train Wreck

MORPETH, England (UPI) — The London to Aberdeen express derailed and crashed with some 300 persons aboard Wednesday but it was silence from the wreckage that impressed housewife Evelyn Dixon.

"The odd thing was that there was no sound from the train — no moaning and no shouting," she said.

Police said six persons were killed and 101 injured when the sleeper express train jumped the tracks as it was rounding a bend before dawn near Morpeth in northeastern England.

The silence shrouded mangled wreckage when Mrs. Dixon and other rescue workers reached the scene near her house.

"It was just chaos," she said. "It was very dark and there was no moon. The odd thing was that there was no sound from the train — no moaning and shouting."

All 11 cars of the London-to-Aberdeen express careened off the tracks, hurling sleeping passengers from their berths. The engine remained on the tracks. The driver escaped unhurt.

Passengers in their pajamas wandered dazed and bleeding from the coaches. Only when rescuers brought arc lamps was the full disaster visible with upended, overturned and shattered coaches strewn down the tracks.

Morpeth police chief David Chester said, "It was fantastic so few people were killed. The train was mangled to pieces."

British railway officials said repairs were made Tuesday on the stretch of track where the derailment occurred, but they said "there was no track replacement or anything like that. The men were only oiling fishplates."

Railway officials said they were trying to find out what caused the wreck.

One passenger, Royal Air Force airman Fraser MacGillivray said, "The whole train rocked violently and I was thrown right through the window. I reckon I'm lucky to be alive."

Another passenger, Lorna Brooke-Hunt, said she was thrown from her bunk.

Electric, Steam Cars Too Impractical

Tomorrow Not for Today, GM Claims

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors took the wraps off some of its experimental cars Wednesday but made it clear they are years away from becoming a reality on the highway.

The 26 experimental cars include three-wheelers and models powered by steam, electricity and hybrid electric-gasoline power plants. Nearly all of them are much smaller than today's cars and some are almost toylike in size.

GM said it has experimented with a nuclear-powered car but dropped the project as being impractical.

Edward N. Cole, GM president, told reporters at GM's Technical Training Centre in suburban Warren, Mich., that despite all the experiments, the car firm is convinced the internal-combustion engine—the type that powers the car of today—is the best unit available.

"All these advance power concepts have advantages—real or potential—over the internal-combustion engine with lower pollutant emissions being a major plus in virtually every case," Cole said.

"But each of them also has major disadvantages which reduce its practical value as an all-round competitor to the internal-combustion engine. If any new power plants are to achieve broad usage—with no reductions in safety, economy and convenience — a major technological breakthrough will be required.

"We do not claim breakthroughs for any of these projects and obviously considerable additional development is necessary before any of the vehicles on display could be made available for production."

Much of the day-long conference was devoted to showing GM's efforts in the fields of air-pollution control and automobile safety, which Cole called vital parts of GM operations. He said improvements in emission-control systems in GM's 1970 line of cars would increase by 10 per cent the current 60-per-cent control of such emissions.

Two steam cars were among the top attention-getters at the show. One is a modified 1969

Pontiac Grand Prix, the other a 1969 Chevelle sedan.

The steam car, which has been one of GM's top-priority research projects, was said to have the advantage of low noise level, low air-pollutant tendencies and good torque characteristics. Its disadvantages include added weight, freezing of the water needed for the steam operation and difficulties in lubrication. "Whether a practical steam-engine automobile can be realized in the future remains an unanswered question," said Dr. Lawrence Hafstad, GM vice-president-research.

The problem of the commuter who needs transportation for short distances with little highway driving came in for attention as five limited urban transportation experimental vehicles were shown.

Two are gasoline-powered, one is electric-powered, a fourth is driven by a hybrid gasoline-electric system and the fifth is a mockup body and chassis with a hybrid system power plant. Four were built to carry two passengers only while the fifth was built for two adults in the front seat and two children in the back.

One, called the 512 Hybrid Gasoline-Electric, is only 66 inches long with a 50-inch wheelbase and curb weight of 1,250 pounds. Its height is only 56 inches and its width 52 inches—far smaller than any North American car on the road.

It can operate either as an electric car or as a gasoline hybrid. If driven as a hybrid, its peak horsepower is 13.8, its top speed 35 miles an hour and it covers 150 miles on three gallons of gasoline.

Bears Take AHL Title

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Goals John Henderson shut out Quebec Aces, 3-0, Wednesday night to help Hershey Bears to their first American Hockey League Calder Cup championship in the last 10 years.

Henderson turned in 27 saves as the Bears captured the best-of-seven final series, 4-1. It was his second shutout against the Aces.

The win was worth $2,000 to each Hershey player while Quebec players each pocketed $1,400.

Flin Flon Still Dirty Words

Barons Make It Back Home

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) —

St. Thomas Barons arrived here today after a hectic 20-hour trip from Flin Flon, Man., and continued a verbal assault on their opposition in the Canadian Hockey Association championship.

The Barons left Flin Flon Tuesday at 11:30 a.m., accepting defeat by default in the CHA championship series against Flin Flon Bombers.

"I wouldn't go back there for all the tea in China," said St. Thomas defenseman Ken Murray today. "It was just awful."

Barons' coach Keith Kewley pulled his team off the ice after fighting broke out Monday night at 10:10 of the second period in the fourth game of the best-of-seven championship. Flin Flon, leading 4-0, was awarded that game to take the series 3-1 in games.

"I take full responsibility for everything that happened," said Kewley.

He said he is not surprised by CHA president Ron Butlin's decision to suspend the Barons.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens next," said Kewley.

Barons' manager Jack Cassidy refused to comment today on either the series or his team's future.

St. Thomas forward Dennis Desrosiers criticized Flin Flon coach Pat Ginnell for his part in a fight Monday night.

"I heard this voice that I recognized as Ginnell's yelling 'kick him, hit him, kick him'."

Four or five players gave me a going over and then the voice said 'let him go'."

"They must think he is God," said Desrosiers.

Defenceman Jack Criel, who formerly played with Flin Flon before joining the Barons, said he expected the series to be rough.

"What they do is change lines when a fight starts," he said. "That way they have 11 men on the ice instead of six."

"Flin Melville (Barons' defenceman) almost lost his head out there. Flin Flon's Gerry Petry tried to kick him in the head. He missed and his skate stuck in the boards."

The team travelled from Flin Flon to Winnipeg by bus, a 382-mile trip. But when they arrived there was no assurance they would be able to get a plane to Toronto.

The players counted their money and all funds were to be pooled to provide bus or train transportation home, if necessary.

A credit plan, however, was used to pay for the airline tickets since all game receipts had been frozen. The club had to pay $400 for the bus from Flin Flon and were charged for an extra day at their hotel in the Manitoba city.

Invite Resumption

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — Flin Flon Bombers proposed Wednesday that the interrupted Canadian Hockey Association final against St. Thomas Barons be resumed, either in London, Ont., or in the Barons' home city with games Saturday and Sunday or on other dates suitable to the Barons.

The offer was made by manager-coach Pat Ginnell in a telegram sent to the Barons and CHA president Ron Butlin of Calgary.

Fingerprint Offending Drivers

Wider Police Power Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Safety Council Wednesday unanimously approved a recommendation for extensively widened police powers to fingerprint and photograph persons charged with driving offences.

It calls for Criminal Code amendments that would allow police to fingerprint and photograph anyone charged with criminal negligence, intoxicated and impaired driving or driving while disqualified, without seeking the accused person's permission.

The resolution, one of several passed at the close of the council's three-day convention, had sparked some earlier criticism from civil rights supporters.

None of the 200 delegates expressed dissent when it was presented to the final plenary session.

Under existing legislation, Crown attorneys have the choice of proceeding with these charges as indictable offences, i.e., serious matters usually with strong penalties, or as summary offences—less serious charges with generally lighter sentences.

An indictable offence is dealt with by a county or higher court, and a summary offence by a provincial court judge or magistrate.

Provincial Judge Rene Marin of Ottawa said in an interview most Crown attorneys handle driving offences as summary matters.

When this happens, he said, police have no legal authority to take fingerprints or photographs. This type of identification can only be made if the offence is indictable.

The council's proposal would give police blanket authority to fingerprint and photograph in all cases involving driving offences.

Judge Marin said one of the greatest difficulties faced by police and the courts is the absence of records with which to check an accused person's previous record.

This would be alleviated if good identification was made of each person charged, he said.

Other resolutions approved:

- The federal consumer affairs department should study the flammability of various kinds of clothing, and the council should begin a program to alert the public to the dangers of clothing fires.
- The federal transport department should require pleasure boat owners to carry a plate indicating the craft's horsepower and load capacity.
- All forms of government in Canada should take steps to ensure that regulations affecting the operation of small boats are enforced.

Kootenay Coal Spur

Railway Branch Wins Approval

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate transport committee gave speedy approval Wednesday to a bill which will allow the CPR to construct a 34-mile branch line from Natal, B.C., north to major coal deposits.

The bill, which will be reported to the Senate without amendment, was outlined to the committee by J. E. Paradis, CPR counsel.

The branch line will be built off the CPR's Cranbrook subdivision. When completed it will move coal to Vancouver, most of it destined for Japan.

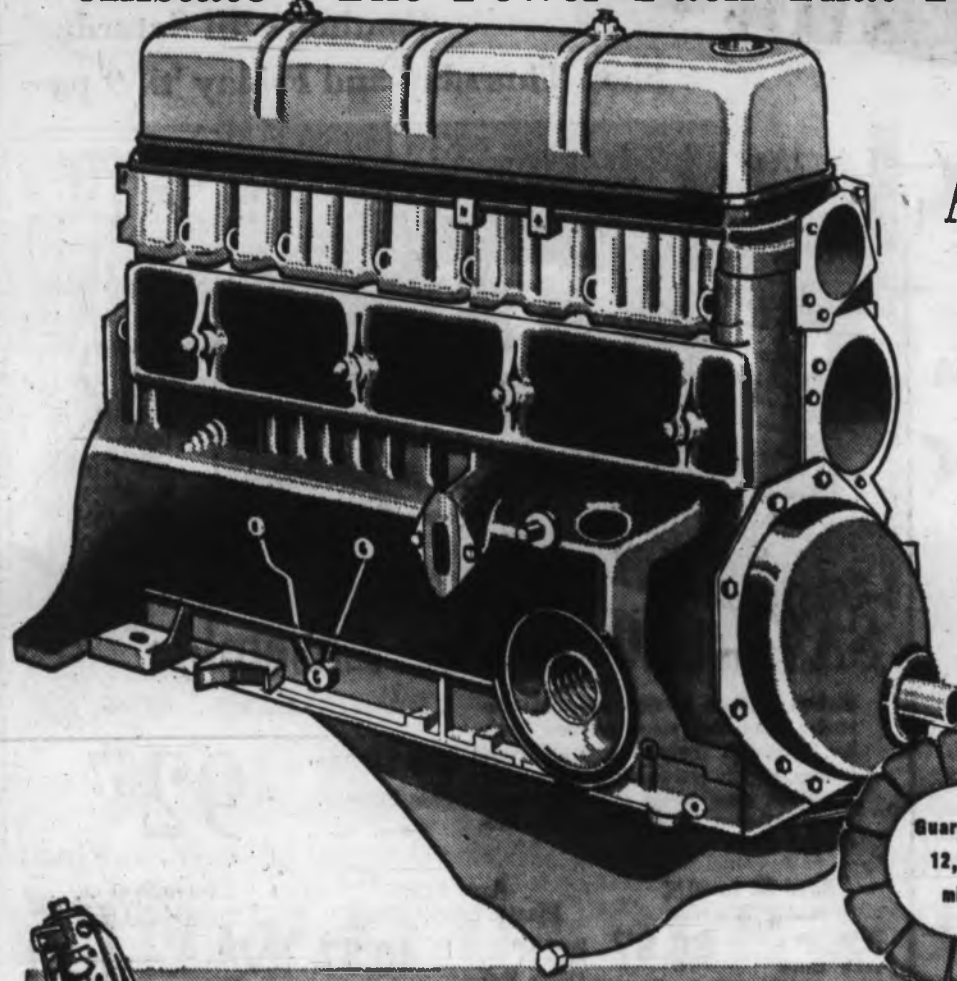

Parliamentary approval to build the line is needed because the Canadian Transport Commission, which usually authorizes such projects, only has jurisdiction over construction of railway lines not exceeding 20 miles.

The coal deposits are in the Kootenay land district.

Secrecy Shrouds Probe of Fortas

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A federal grand jury Wednesday began an investigation into the allegations the former law firm of Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas withheld subpoenaed documents in a price fixing case.

Justice department attorneys appeared before the regular session of the U.S. district court grand jury to present details of a lengthy investigation into action taken in 1967 by the law firm of Arnold and Porter.

SECRET SESSION

U.S. Attorney Bernard Stupinski confirmed only that the jury was meeting here in its usual secret session and that justice department attorneys were in town.

"It's out of my hands," Stupinski said and declined further comment.

When the jury recessed for lunch, a woman leaving the room was asked if she was involved in the investigation of the law firm.

"Yes, I am," she said and refused further comment. An official in the U.S. attorney's office said the closed-door investigation could last several days, and it could be even longer before its report was made public.

The jury adjourned for the day at 4 p.m. and left the federal building, with government spokesmen declining comment. Another closed door session was expected today.

Arnold and Porter initially represented Donovan Steel and Wire Co., one of several steel companies involved in a price-fixing case tried in Toledo, Ohio, in 1967.

Irwin Fruchtmann, an executive of the Donovan firm, was the only person convicted in the case. Three others were indicted.

Fruchtmann's conviction resulted from his attorneys' failure to deliver some 3,000 allegedly false invoices subpoenaed by the government in August, 1967. When the government subpoenaed the records the second time in June, 1968, the documents were turned over by Vincent Fuller, a member of the Williams and Connolly law firm which had taken over the case from Arnold and Porter.

Fortas said he took a fee but later returned it when he discovered he would not be able to advise and write for the Wolfson family foundation. Wolfson has since started a year's jail sentence for violation of the stock market laws.

Taft did not specify which member of Congress he thought would file a bill of impeachment if the issue is not clarified, but he said at a news conference, "I have the feeling that unless he explains further, impeachment is a good possibility."

Under the constitution, impeachment proceedings

must begin in the House. If a bill of impeachment is agreed to by the House, the Senate then acts as a court in trying the impeached official.

Any House member may file an impeachment resolution. It would then be referred to the House judiciary committee for consideration. Later, if the committee and the House voted the impeachment, the Senate would conduct the actual impeachment trial.

vided for revocation of office.

Taft made his statement in response to questions while explaining a bill he and Sen. Robert Griffin (R-Mich.) plan to introduce today. It would require federal judges to file information about their income, property holdings, gifts, honorariums and fees. Similar requirements are now in the law for Senators and Congressmen.

Griffin told the news conference there was "more information" yet to come out about the Fortas affair. He said it bore on the Wolfson affair, but declined to elaborate.

Griffin led the successful fight last year against confirmation of Fortas as chief justice, a post he was selected for by president Lyndon John-

Impeachment Bill Probable in Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Robert Taft, Jr. (R-Ohio) predicted Wednesday a bill of impeachment will be filed against Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas unless there is further explanation of a fee he accepted from the family foundation of financier Louis Wolfson and his brothers.

Fortas said he took a fee but later returned it when he discovered he would not be able to advise and write for the Wolfson family foundation. Wolfson has since started a year's jail sentence for violation of the stock market laws.

Taft did not specify which member of Congress he thought would file a bill of impeachment if the issue is not clarified, but he said at a news conference, "I have the feeling that unless he explains further, impeachment is a good possibility."

Under the constitution, impeachment proceedings

must begin in the House. If a bill of impeachment is agreed to by the House, the Senate then acts as a court in trying the impeached official.

Any House member may file an impeachment resolution. It would then be referred to the House judiciary committee for consideration. Later, if the committee and the House voted the impeachment, the Senate would conduct the actual impeachment trial.

vided for revocation of office.

Taft made his statement in response to questions while explaining a bill he and Sen. Robert Griffin (R-Mich.) plan to introduce today. It would require federal judges to file information about their income, property holdings, gifts, honorariums and fees. Similar requirements are now in the law for Senators and Congressmen.

Griffin told the news conference there was "more information" yet to come out about the Fortas affair. He said it bore on the Wolfson affair, but declined to elaborate.

Griffin led the successful fight last year against confirmation of Fortas as chief justice, a post he was selected for by president Lyndon John-

Others Win Council Seats

First Negro Mayor Elected By City in North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Voters gave North Carolina its first Negro mayor of a predominantly white community Tuesday when they elected Howard Lee, son of a sharecropper, over veteran alderman Roland Giduz.

"The vote was strong (for Lee) in every place except the precinct called 'Country Club,'" said Lee's campaign manager, Bill Barnes. He said that businessmen, long-time residents and retired persons lived in the affluent neighborhood.

Lee, who received more than 54 per cent of the vote, had good support from liberal faculty and staff members at the University of North Carolina here, new residents in the city and Negroes.

Giduz, a lifelong resident of

Lee

Chapel Hill, is on the staff of the UNC Alumni Association.

Lee, who said his election "would really shake up the system," promised to deal with employment, housing and public transportation needs in this university community.

Several cities across the Tar Heel state recorded "firsts" for Negroes Tuesday.

Rev. Thurman Murphy, a Methodist minister, is the first Negro councilman elected in Laurinburg.

Aholsie elected its first Negro councilman, Henry Marsh, a barbershop operator, who defeated J. C. Sessoms Sr., on the town council for 44 years.

Jacob Ruffin, 35, became Murfreesboro's first Negro to win a council seat.

At Bayboro, Kenneth Bell became the first Negro to get a town council seat.

Specially Priced for Mother's Day

Tug for Supership Era

Canada's largest salvage tug — Island Tug & Barge Ltd.'s Sudbury II — will be rebuilt at a cost of $1,500,000, her owners announced Wednesday.

When the job is completed, the Victoria-based tug will be virtually a new vessel, with 10,500 horsepower and a completely new silhouette. Even her name will be changed — to plain Sudbury, after the company's first great salvage vessel, which was sold for scrap in 1966.

Plans call for completion of renovations by the end of the year but no announcement has been made as to where the job will be done.

The new conformation has been worked out by Vancouver naval architects Cove Hatfield & Company.

The big, 216-foot tug, flagship of the Island Tug fleet, has been making headlines ever since the company commissioned her in 1960. The list of ships she has saved from the sea in a long one: Elli, Atlantic Sun, Olympic Palm, Tainan, Lefidipon, to name just a few.

One of the last of her salvage jobs was also the most dangerous. In the spring of 1968 she succeeded in putting a line aboard the fire-gutted, 700-foot tanker Mandool II, and towing the ship, loaded with a dangerous naphtha-like cargo, to safety in nine days through bucking seas and storms.

NEW FEATURES

Here are some of the features of the new Sudbury:

- Cruising range of 10,000 miles without refueling.
- Equipment for tropical as well as North Pacific waters.
- Officers' and crew's quarters, lounge, bridge, galley and other living and working areas completely air-conditioned.
- Stereo sound system and television in lounge-mess.
- Lower, raked profile with streamlined funnel.
- Wrap-around windows in wheelhouse.

Control functions completely automated. All prime functions will be controlled from the bridge, as well as from three other command positions.

Propulsion by two 20-cylinder, turbo-charged G.M. engines driving controllable-pitch propellers 50 feet in diameter, should produce high free-running speed in excess of 18 knots and will generate towline pulls of more than 75 tons.

Her new equipment and power will enable her to handle just about anything afloat, including the new superships.

Meatcutters Hedge On Strike Threat

A spokesman for about 150 local meatcutters working in supermarket chains said Wednesday that the union was going "all-out" in its demand for a shorter work week, but would probably not strike.

George Johnson, secretary-manager of the Meatcutters' local of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, said a four-day, 36-hour work week had been the union's demand for 10 years, and "we are going to make an all-out effort on this position."

But he later added, "the name of the game is not strike — the name of the game is settlement."

Mr. Johnson told the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday that the companies (locally, Safeway, Shop-Easy and Super-Valu) had said in newspaper advertisements that the union demands would force an increase in the cost of meat.

Mr. Johnson denied this and said the demands would mean only an increase of half a cent a pound of meat sold. He said that without any change in labor contracts, wholesale price of beef had gone up from 49 cents a pound in January to 54 cents in April. This represented up to 35 cents a pound retail, depending on the cut.

Mr. Johnson said that labor costs in the supermarkets represent only 6 per cent of the price of beef.

Whittemore Rites Set for Friday

Funeral service will be held at 1:30 p.m. Friday for Thomas Whittemore, 76, long-time teacher at Oak Bay high school, who died Tuesday in Veterans' Hospital.

Mr. Whittemore, of 2172 Oxbow Lane, had been ill for several months. Prior to his retirement he taught for 38 years at Oak Bay high and was at one time principal of the school.

He specialized in mathematics and coached soccer. Mr. Whittemore served in the Royal Navy during the First World War.

He is survived by his wife, Florence, a daughter, Sheila, in North Vancouver, a son, Thomas, Jr., of Redwood City, Calif., and three grandchildren. The Friday service will be conducted in St. Mary's Church, Elgin Road, by Rev. Hywel Jones. Cremation will follow.

Soldier Wins Actions

A 20-year-old serviceman, Gerald Albert Fay, was awarded damages totalling $14,000 in Supreme Court here Tuesday.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton found that the young soldier suffered fractures to two of his vertebrae when he was involved in a car accident while the passenger of Bryan Michael Clark.

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Wootton said, "In spite of warnings and pleas to slow down, he drove, I find, at a speed of between 55 and 65 miles an hour on a 30-mile roadway into a dangerous intersection, with almost tragic results."

The court awarded $8,000 damages against Clark and another $8,000 for a military accident Mr. Fay suffered three months later at Camp Wainwright in Alberta.

Mr. Justice Wootton found that "If he is discharged from the forces, he should be pensionable."

The judgment went on to say no claim had been made against the army for damages resulting from the military accident. Mr. Justice Wootton said he could not accept counsel's argument that the second injury was caused as a result of the back injury suffered by Mr. Fay in the car accident.

The action against Mr. Clark was brought by Mr. Fay's father, Emil Fay, a Manitoba farmer.

Icelandic Honor

Victoria Man Named

A Victoria man has been appointed to represent the Icelandic National League in North America when the 25th anniversary of the Icelandic Republic is observed this summer in Reykjavik, capital of Iceland.

Dr. Richard Beck of 28 Marlborough Street will speak at the commemoration ceremonies there, to be broadcast nationally in Iceland.

Before that, he will spend the latter part of May and the first part of June speaking to various groups in Iceland.

PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

Dr. Beck will also give one of the principal addresses at the convention banquet of the All-Scandinavian Temperance Congress, which will open its meeting July 19 in Reykjavik.

Dr. and Mrs. Beck will leave Iceland Aug. 2 for Manitoba, where Dr. Beck will give one of the two main addresses at the annual Icelandic festival at Gimli, Aug. 4.

AUGUST RETURN

The Becks will return to Victoria Aug. 7.

Dr. Beck, a past president of the Icelandic National League in North America, retired to Victoria in 1967 after 38 years as professor of Scandinavian languages and literature at the University of North Dakota.

His wife, the former Margaret Brandon, was born in Victoria.

City to Host Championship

Victoria has been awarded the senior "A" men's provincial softball championship, which will be played Aug. 9 and 10. Ward Lloyd, president of the B.C. Amateur Softball Association, confirmed the decision in a letter received by the Victoria Major Men's League executive.

Eight teams will compete for the B.C. championship and the chance to advance against the Alberta champion. Games will be played at Central Park.

SPECIAL MOTHER'S DAY RECIPE

Quick 'n' Easy Breakfast for Mom

Crispy Baked Eggs (makes 4)

1 1/2 tsp. melted butter or bacon fat
1 1/2 cups cornflakes
1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese
4 eggs
Salt and pepper

Pour butter over cornflakes and toss lightly to mix. Arrange in four greased custard cups to form nests, or in four greased sections of a muffin pan.

Break eggs carefully, slipping one into each nest. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, then grated cheese.

Bake in a 325 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until the eggs are firm. To serve, loosen with a knife; lift gently with a spoon.

Shepard Returns To Duty

HOUSTON (UPI) — America's first man in space, astronaut Alan Shepard, has won his six-year battle to regain space pilot status and may get an assignment to land on the moon next year, the space agency said Wednesday.

Shepard's surprise return to the ranks of flight qualified astronauts followed a secret operation last year in Los Angeles to correct an inner ear problem that left him grounded in 1963 after just one space mission.

During Shepard's operation doctors implanted a plastic tube in Shepard's left ear to relieve pressure. The inner ear problem had knocked Shepard out of making both space flights and "If I didn't think I could go back, I wouldn't be here," Shepard said in an interview about 18 months ago.

Only Shepard's left ear was affected by the infection, called labyrinthitis. The space agency said Shepard underwent "minor surgery" on the ear in May of 1968.

"Shepard's health has remained excellent during the past year, and consultant ear specialists consider his former problem no longer presents a threat of recurring," astronaut physician Dr. Charles Berry said. "He is therefore adequately qualified to return to full piloting duty."

BOSS HAPPY

Shepard's boss, astronaut chief Donald Slayton, said he was "happy for Shepard to be back on flight status."

Slayton, who has never gone into space because of a heart condition, becomes the nation's only grounded astronaut.

Slayton said Shepard has not been assigned to any crew duties, but that he now joins the group of astronauts qualified for future flight crew assignments.

The first two moon landing teams already have been named for Apollo 11 and Apollo 12, both scheduled to fly this year. The space agency plans at least four lunar landings, and possibly as many as 10.

ORIGINAL

Shepard, one of the nation's famous "original seven" Mercury spacemen, is a native of East Derry, N.H. He is married and the father of two daughters.

Only four of the original Mercury astronauts remain in the spaceman corps. Mercury pilot Virgil Grissom died in the Apollo 1 fire that killed three astronauts in 1967. Walter Schirra resigned as an astronaut last March to go into private business, and John Glenn, America's first man in orbit, quit the space program in 1963 to try his hand at politics.

Glenn fell in his bathroom shortly after leaving the astronaut corps and suffered an ear problem similar to Shepard's. It knocked him out of politics and he became a soft drink executive.

The space agency said Shepard's ear problem was in no way connected to his flight.

Shepard

both aircraft flights, although he could fly airplanes if another pilot was with him.

Asked if Shepard might now get a moon landing flight, a space agency spokesman said: "He is certainly in those (astronauts) that are considered qualified." The spokesman said Shepard's first opportunity for a moon flight would be one of two missions planned for next year.

Shepard blasted into space May 5, 1961 in a tiny, bell-shaped Mercury spacecraft that carried him into space but not into orbit.

The ear infection eliminated Shepard from the two-man Gemini space flight program. The crewed space pilot became head of the astronaut office but never gave up his hopes of returning to space.

Management Course

Pueblo Skipper Posted Ashore

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher, who expressed a desire to captain another ship during investigation of his surrender of the Pueblo, Wednesday was assigned to shore duty along with all but one of the spy vessel's crew.

Bucher was assigned to the navy's graduate school at Monterey, Calif., for a year's study toward a masters degree in management.

The only sailor among the 82 surviving members of the 83-man crew to return to sea duty was Signalman W. G. Leach of Houston, Tex., who will serve aboard the destroyer Haynsworth.

A navy spokesman, however, said it is customary to rotate men between shore and sea duty.

The navy board of inquiry which investigated the North Korean seizure of the Pueblo recommended that Bucher and the officer in charge of the vessel's research unit, Lieut. Stephen Harris, be court-martialed. But Navy Secretary John Chafee overruled the board Tuesday, declaring the men had suffered enough already.

The board of inquiry criticized Bucher for failing to take "immediate and aggressive" action to prevent the capture of his command.

It said Harris, reassigned to the naval security group headquarters in Washington, failed to destroy his secret intelligence-gathering gear and secret data it had collected.

Assignment 'Pleases'

Although Bucher had made known his desire to skipper another ship, the defence department Wednesday said: "Cmdr. Bucher has indicated to the bureau of naval personnel that he is very pleased with this (graduate school) assignment."

During the inquiry, Bucher said there was nothing he would rather do than return to sea duty as a skipper of another ship—a post traditionally shunned by naval officers.

At the conclusion of his one-year graduate course at Monterey, the navy could reassign Bucher to sea duty and give him command of another vessel.

The defence department also announced that the court of inquiry had singled out 10 members of the Pueblo crew for special praise because of their conduct during 11 months of captivity.

One, 23-year-old communications technician Earl Kleier of St. Louis, "received a gruesome beating which rendered him unrecognizable to his shipmates for a week thereafter" when he refused to write a propaganda letter to the American press, The Pentagon said.

Another, Marine Sgt. Robert Hamon, 24, of Claremont, N.H., "held out through a total of 19 hours of severe torture until unable to resist any longer before he provided information about his job aboard the Pueblo."

Seaman Dale Rigby, 22, of Centerville, Utah, was cited for withstanding "horror and hardship" in caring for three wounded roommates and with probably saving the life of fireman apprentice Steven Wozek, 21, of Altavista, Kan.

Soviets Flay Chinese

MOSCOW (UPI) — Leading Soviet newspapers Wednesday accused Mao Tse-tung of an "unprecedented militarization" of China's nearly 1 billion people, including kindergarten children, in preparation for a world war.

The charge was only one of several levelled against the chairman of China's Communist party by the Soviet press.

Mao also was accused of legalizing his own personal power and establishing a "monarchic" succession in the party and of using "Soviet weapons" destined for North Vietnam against his domestic opposition.

The war-preparation charge was made by Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star) publication of the Soviet defence ministry. It said Mao has "militarized the entire country."

Arctic Oil Deposits Next Step?

MOSCOW (AP) — An exploration well recently struck oil on the Yamal peninsula of the Soviet far north, is leading to conclusions that huge petroleum and gas deposits lie beneath the Arctic Ocean, Tass said Wednesday.

An article by Tass commentator Valentin Vasilyev said geologists have established that oil and gas bearing sands underlie the entire peninsula and stretches out beneath the bed of the Kara Sea, an arm of the Arctic Ocean.

While the well on the peninsula yielded about 2,820 barrels a day, Vasilyev said, it still was a question of whether a field could be developed soon in that cold and barren region.

Wilson Told: Go Easier on Unions

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson got a tip from one of his most respected followers Wednesday to either tone down measures to tame wildcat strikers or face the possible disintegration of the Labor party.

Political insiders suggest Wilson will accept the advice and beat a hasty retreat, finding some way of watering down the controversial union reform bill without losing too much face.

HOUGHTON WARNS
The ominous warning came from Douglas Houghton, 70, chairman of the Parliamentary Labor party and one of its most respected elder statesmen. Houghton has been working behind the scenes to end the war between Wilson and back-bench mavericks who have threatened to bolt the party over the issue.

They and many of Britain's unions have fiercely attacked the legislation and particularly the clauses which call for court fines for unofficial strikes. Wildcat walkouts have been described as one of Britain's most aggravating industrial problems, forcing delays in exports and other vital production, sometimes on trivial issues.

MAY CALL ELECTION
Wilson has repeatedly stated that if his followers fail to support him and the bill is defeated in the House, he would call an election which might mean dismissal for many of the mavericks.

But Houghton, speaking to a group of Labor MPs, said Wilson should not fall into the error of believing he could ram legislation through the House through sheer determination.

UNITY VITAL
"It cannot be done without us," he said.

At another point he maintained that party unity matters more to Britain "than the marginal damage of unconstitutional strikes."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I did a slow burn when that guy wrote to complain that his wife acts like she's doing him a favor once every two weeks. A timetable like that would have been heaven to me.

I married Aggie when I was 26. She was 22. What I thought was high principles turned out to be a pathological hatred for sex. From the night we married until I left her, 17 years later, Aggie wore underwear and ankle socks under her nightgown. She also had this thing about lubrication her skin so it wouldn't wrinkle. At bedtime she put so much grease on, she looked like she was fixing to swim the English Channel.

And then of course there were the headaches and backaches and colds. She managed to get sick colds a year, each one lasting a month.

I am now married to a wonderful gal who knows that sex can be a bond that ties a man and woman together. My only mistake was waiting 17 years to lead a normal life.

Not All Maniacs

You print lots of letters from women who think their husbands are sex maniacs. Please print this one and help even the score. Alive and Well in Decatur.

Dear Anne: The score will never be even, but your letter helps balance it a bit. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Why do people get belligerent and act insulted when they want to cash a cheque and are asked to produce identification? Don't they realize employees have to keep records? It isn't enough that a person has an honest face.

Understanding Wanted

Dear Ab: Here's your letter and I hope it helps promote better understanding on the part of the customers.

Dear Ann Landers: Our 19-year-old daughter is a sophomore at a well known school in the east. Judy has always been considered one of the better brought up young ladies of this town. But her language since she has been away at school is appalling. She uses some very dirty words in ordinary everyday conversation. Her father, half-kidding, said, "When you were younger I used to wash your mouth out with soap and I might have to do it again."

Judy's answer was, "I tell it like it is. Words are only sounds. Get with it."

What should a parent say in response? Speechless.

Dear Speech: A parent should say, "If you want to stay in this house you'd better use decent language to tell it like it is. We don't go for you'd better get with it."

With all of its new-found fashion-ability, terrycloth has lost none of its beloved, easy care features. It is still completely machine washable and dryable, and requires no ironing.

As care insurance, heed these few helpful hints: Garments made in deep or dark colors should be laundered separately the first few times just in case of any "bleeding."

Because terrycloth is a napped fabric, it will look richer after the wash-dry process if the nap is tuned up with a clean, dry clothes brush.

One sure thing, you can depend on terry for beach, patio and porch this summer. A gray terry shirtdress would be great even in the city.

All the Way Back to Roman Empire

Old Jewelry Newest Fad

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD
NEW YORK — The latest thing in jewelry is old. It is anywhere from 200 years old back to B.C.

It isn't jewelry on the same terms as a square cut diamond or an emerald pendant the size of an egg. Actually it starts with the kind of beautiful little object every woman who goes places picks up in Tokyo, Hong Kong, Beirut, Rome, or wherever. Back home, it's too small and unimportant to display on a table and ends its days in the back of a drawer.

I don't know what bright girl or brainy jeweller first thought of turning a collector's item into something to wear, but the fad has set in. Dozens of women have already admired the pre-Columbian jade head Ventura converted to a stunning jewel for Mrs. David Evans and the antique porcelain dollie David Webb made into a pin for Eleanor Lambert.

When Mrs. Andrew Goodman opened her birthday present from her husband, it was, to put it mildly, a one of a kind brooch. An antique Japanese carving of four playful Oriental children, at least six inches wide, was mounted on a gold base covered with cabochon emeralds and sapphires and a small, gold rising sun was added at the top.

The pin is part of a collection jeweller Marc Koven is getting together with Mrs. Stanley for the rest of the world. Already there is a small green god of Mexican jade and a Norse head carved out of walrus tusk and mounted on an aquamarine.

The new jewelry solves lots of problems besides "I want something different from anybody else's." It's big enough to count in a world where jewelry has to be headlight size or else. The price range of $2,000 to $3,000 makes it a far cry from catnip to a cat burglar.

What's more I doubt very much if, handy as he is, Kenny Jay Lane can ever knock it off into costume jewelry.

Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Nicholson will give a tea at Government House today for wives of delegates attending the Olympic Logging Conference.

Later in the day His Honor will cross to Vancouver where he will attend a dinner given by the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, in the UBC Faculty Club.

The Nicholsons will give a tea Friday at Government House for the wives of the members of the Shrine from all over North America who are holding a convention in Victoria.

That evening the lieutenant-governor will attend the Battle of the Atlantic Dinner in the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, given by the Naval Officers' Association of Vancouver Island.

Departure for Europe

Of interest to many here is the departure for Europe this week of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Borden of Victoria.

Mrs. Borden, widow of the late William Fraser Tolmie, and Mr. Borden were recently married in Quebec. On return here they were accompanied by Mrs. Borden's daughter, Anne Tolmie, granddaughter of the late Dr. Simon Tolmie, former premier of B.C. and federal agriculture minister.

The Bordens are travelling by ship via the Panama to the Mediterranean and will visit Italy and Yugoslavia before going on to Britain and Ireland where they will visit numerous friends.

Mrs. T. Gervase Chambers and Mrs. Dorothy Palmer are in Parksville for the B.C. Drama Association one act festival, Zone 1, Vancouver Island. Mrs. Chambers is president and Mrs. Palmer is secretary of the Country Church Players.

Fashions in Morning

Something new is slated for St. Christopher's School this coming Saturday — there is to be a Coffee Morning and Children's Fashion Show.

The fashions, all from Grenadier House, will be modelled by St. Christopher's pupils starting at 10:30 a.m. Mrs. R. C. Stuart is convener. Funds raised will go toward construction of an addition to the school and to publicize the unique summer program at St. Christopher's which starts July 2.

This program will consist of experiments and experiences in music, painting, puppetry and woodwork for children from four to 10 years of age.

The highlight of these summer sessions will be the drama groups directed by Peter McWhir.

Children may attend classes for any length of time during the eight-week program. For further information call Mrs. Faith McNeel-Caird at 383-6812.

African Violet Display

An African Violet display and tea will be held on Friday and Saturday in the Douglas room of The Bay. The display will be open from 1:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Friday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Fire Destroys Crockett Items

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Davy Crockett's Museum was hit by lightning recently and the resulting fire destroyed many relics from the Tennessee life of the hero of the Alamo. Among the items lost was a restored, water-driven mill wheel used to grind corn at Crockett's mill-distillery-powder mill.

There will also be an educational table where the culture and hints on growing the violets will be available.

Quite a few of the violet-growers suffered losses during the past hard winter — the violets just don't take to chilling. However, nothing seems to daunt the popularity of these plants — they gain in popularity every year.

Mrs. J. C. Yates, president of the association here, tells me the culture of violets can be likened to the six spokes of a wheel. Humidity, temperature, fertilizer, light, soil and water all have to be in balance or the plants won't grow the way they should.

The Victoria group is already working on plans for the national convention in Victoria in 1971.

ERMA BOMBECK at the Science Fair

Best-Laid Plans Bleed a Little

Science Fair Bulletin No. 1, February, 1969

The Science Fair will be held in the spring. Basic rules follow now so that work can be started, etc. . . .

"Mom, do I have a neat idea. This year I'm going to make a human heart with valves and real blood and everything. While you're at the store could you get me a large cardboard box, two boxes of plastic bags, 20 feet of plastic tubing and some cake coloring?"

Science Fair Bulletin No. 2, March, 1969.

Just a reminder that it is not too late to start your project for the Science Fair. The contestants may enter only one exhibit . . . etc. . . .

"Mom, you'll never guess what I'm going to enter. A missile site, complete with riggings, astronauts, buildings and a recording that gives the countdown. I'll have it setup that when the recording says, Blast Off, a liquid fuel will ignite and the rocket will lift off to the ceiling of the gym and back again until the next group turns on the recording. The heart? The crummy thing leaked. Could you get me some sand and a dozen palm trees while you're out?"

Science Fair Bulletin No. 3, March, 1969.

The Science Fair Committee, in order to estimate space needed for the exhibits are asking contestants to indicate on a 3-by-5 card what they are going to enter, etc. . . .

"Volcano. Four feet by eight feet tall. A most will surround the volcano, representing the sea. When viewers push a button, smoke and lava will pour from the center of the volcano. This is a change from my original entry. The liquid fuel system leaked."

Science Fair Bulletin No. 4, April, 1969

The date of the Science Fair is May 10. A reminder that construction must be durable, etc. . . .

"While you're out in the car, Mom, could you pick me up an incubator, six fertilized eggs, a basket of straw and . . . that crummy volcano leaked!"

Science Fair Bulletin No. 5, May 1, 1969

Science Fair exhibitors will be judged on 30 points for creativity, 20 points for scientific thoroughness, 30 points for skill, etc. . . .

"I know you smell something. Blame it on the chicken. The eggs weren't fertilized. Know what I'm going to enter? A weather station. You wouldn't have eight plastic bleach bottles, a ping pong ball, a couple of dowels, three empty coffee cans and a wind sock would you? By tomorrow?"

Science Fair Bulletin No. 6, May 8, 1969.

Tomorrow is the day. Each exhibit must have attached or displayed adjacent a neatly

Escaped 'Killer' Plans New Life

(Colombian Los Angeles Times Service)

LOS ANGELES — Beatrice Simmons, who spent her last honeymoon in the death cell of a Mexican penitentiary, is planning another one in a more traditional setting. This time she wants to go to Niagara Falls.

She married Dyes Simmons, Aug. 2, 1964, in the Nuevo Leon state prison, where Simmons had been sentenced to die before a firing squad for the 1959 murder of three members of a Monterrey, Mex., family.

The sentence was later commuted to 25 years. Simmons escaped from the prison April 6 and flew to Los Angeles, where his wife — who had left Mexico earlier — rejoined him a week ago.

"When I came in at the bus terminal," she said, "I couldn't imagine what he looked like. I hadn't seen him outside of prison since we were married."

"She'd always seen me in dirty jail khaki," said Simmons, a husky man of 40 with bright blue eyes and hair which turned prematurely gray during 10 years in prison.

"Not dirty," said Mrs. Simmons, a hazel-eyed redhead whose age was given as 31 when she was married five years ago. "They weren't dirty because I washed them myself, in a bucket."

Normalcy is coming slowly to the Simmons, who had never known it before. During most of their married life Simmons was under sentence of death, and their home — where, in the manner of Mexican penology, they were allowed to weekend together — was an 8-by-5 foot former latrine.

"I didn't know how he'd take to freedom," said Mrs. Simmons, glancing at her husband.

"I'm still restless," said Simmons, packing up and down the office of his attorney, Dennis Fredrickson, in Beverly Hills. "I can't sit down yet."

They had come to Fredrickson's office to see if there had been any new development in the attempts by the Nuevo Leon state government to extradite Simmons and force him to finish his prison sentence.

The matter is now in the hands of Mexico's foreign ministry which hasn't yet asked U.S. authorities to return Simmons to Mexico.

"It took 16 months for your trial," said Fredrickson. "Let's hope it takes that long to put together an extradition request."

Simmons met Beatrice

Bragg, a West Virginian, when he was in the army in Virginia in the early 1950s. Later, in prison, he thought about Mrs. Bragg — now widowed — and, in 1963, he wrote her. "A man down there can think of a lot of things," said Simmons. "I wrote her. She wrote back."

She had heard about his being in prison in Mexico. Magazine articles — had described Simmons as "the forgotten American" serving time for a crime he insists he had nothing to do with.

(Fredrickson believes Mexican authorities, seeking an American as a suspect, settled on Simmons — who was vacationing near Monterrey — because they had to produce a killer.)

A lengthy correspondence led to Mrs. Bragg leaving her job as a doctor's receptionist in Cleveland to visit Simmons in the Monterrey prison in May, 1964. She stayed in Mexico and, in August, a judge married them in his cell.

"When you get married, your wife is allowed to spend 10 days with you," said Simmons. "That was our honeymoon."

A former construction worker, he hasn't found a job yet. When he does, he and his wife expect to be married again — and then take a second honeymoon.

"I'd kinda like to go to Arizona," said Simmons. "Honey," said his wife, "what about Niagara Falls?"

Lords Impose Ban On Imported Bali

LONDON (Reuters) — A nine-year legal bust-up between two brassiere makers has been settled in the House of Lords.

The case, known as The Battle of the Bras, ended Tuesday with five lords in the country's highest court of appeal deciding that women buying bras here are likely to confuse a Ball with a Berlie — both trademarks.

They ruled that the name Ball must not be used as a trademark in British lingerie shops by the Ball Brassiere Co. of the United States.

Britain's Berlie company got the decisive uplift in a legal wrangle that confronted a registrar, a High Court judge, three Court of Appeal judges and finally the law lords.

This Was Real Ring Job

TORONTO (CP) — David Potter collected an audience of four firemen, six ambulance drivers, four policemen, three nurses and two interns after he became attached to his girl-friend's sports car Tuesday night.

Potter, 23, a research analyst, was parked with Barbara McCulloch, 23, a University of Toronto student, when he stuck his left index finger into a hole in the aluminum spoke of her new car's steering wheel.

They drove to the emergency department of Toronto General Hospital, where hot soapy water and grease failed to unstuck the finger.

The fire department rescue squad had more success with bolt cutters. Two large firemen climbed into the tiny car, cut through the spoke, and snipped off the remaining ring of aluminum.

No Evidence in 'Spy' Raid, But Cloud Stays

Colonist London Times Service LONDON — Special Branch police who two weeks ago raided the home of industrial chemist Dr. Alfred Laurence and questioned him about allegations of spying, now are convinced there is no case against him.

Last Wednesday two of the police officers who originally questioned him again visited the Laurence home and returned to him sheets of carbon paper, two writing blocks, and pills which they had taken away to examine.

"They said that, as far as the police were concerned, the whole affair was now closed," said Laurence. "They apologized and told me that they hoped I felt no hostility against them."

However, there is still no sign of a statement on the whole affair, which police originally assured Laurence would be issued. It seems clear no such statement will now be issued.

One aspect of the case which needs some clarification is the manner in which the raid was organized. The police originally applied for a search warrant April 12, but had to wait for a week before Laurence returned from a vacation in Minorca.

During this time police activity was so marked, neighbors were telephoning the local station to complain. And several days before the actual raid, rumors had reached at least one journalist that "a big spy arrest in Purley (the London suburb where Laurence lives) is imminent."

This leakage almost certainly explains the massive and dramatic publicity produced by the original raid, with some journalists arriving at the house at the same moment as the police.

It is also the probable reason why some early reports jumped to the conclusion that both Laurence and his wife had been arrested.

Laurence's lawyer, Michael Pringle, said: "It is intolerable that Dr. Laurence should be kept under a cloud of suspicion after the publicity which surrounded the case in its early stages."

"He states: 'If I have done something wrong, then I should be charged to get a chance to clear my name,'" the lawyer said.

"The effect of the continued silence by the authorities imposes considerable strain not only on Dr. Laurence but also on his wife and his 12-year-old daughter. A fortnight has now elapsed since MI5 (British Intelligence) obtained their information for assessment."

Dr. Laurence is bemused as to what else remains to be done or checked before a statement is issued clearing him of the unsubstantiated allegations.

Laurence, is a German-born American citizen living in Britain. He has told newsmen he was contacted by Russian agents in Berlin and England but never did any spying for them, nor agreed to.

"I have told the police everything," he says. "I have held nothing back; and my only 'crime' apparently was to allow myself to be interviewed by Russian agents on four occasions."

"I am not a spy. The idea is ridiculous. I could never do such work. All I have ever engaged in is industrial intelligence. I may have mentioned the word 'espionage' under stress — but I have never engaged in any illegal or nefarious activities. My idea of industrial intelligence is to visit foreign countries, discuss projects with my colleagues, send my employees my scientific assessment of situations — never anything worse."

"I have served my adopted country well, and courageously I have earned a battlefield commission from the American army. And from all my work I have never become rich. All I have saved is my two houses here in England, a little money in the bank here, and some $7,000 in various European banks from my work for the Minnesota Mining Company. My work now is as a university professor. I have just spent some time at the University of Utah.

"I did for some time send in one or two small reports to the CIA in America. But I was never on the payroll. I never received a penny for them. Again, this was never more than routine intelligence. Never any real spying."

Names in the News

Pope Levels Blast At Toy Weapons

VATICAN CITY — One day after delegates to a European toy-makers' congress called toy weapons useful because they channel aggressiveness in a harmless direction, Pope Paul appeared before the group to say such weapons are bad for children.

"We feel it is our duty to remind you that toys have a great educational importance," he told delegates representing 1,800 firms in 10 nations. "Luxury toys root certain habits in the minds, weapons develop aggressiveness, other toys incite cruelty toward animals and still others invite dangerous attitudes."

He didn't name any specific toys but did praise chess and sports contests.

LONDON — Russia and the London Zoo decided the Soviet's giant panda An-An will go home May 21 without having mated with London's Chi-Chi despite the fact they lived together for almost a year and An-An was given hormones. A London spokesman said, "The unique opportunity of observing two giant pandas together has been presented — an opportunity that may never occur again. We are very sad it's over."

BELFAST — Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark won a unanimous vote of confidence from Parliament after pledging universal suffrage in local elections.

CAMBRIDGE, England — Trinity College elected Prof. John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard a visiting fellow during the academic year 1970-71.

FULTON, Mo. — An old London church was dedicated as the Winston Churchill memorial library on the campus of Westminster College, where he delivered his Iron Curtain speech 23 years ago. Earl Mountbatten officiated.

EDMONTON — Lieutenant-Governor Grant MacEwan prorogued the second session of the 16th Alberta legislature after a record session lasting 58 days.

NEW YORK — Conservative editor William Buckley sued liberal writer Gore Vidal for $500,000, claiming Vidal falsely alleged he is a Nazi when they appeared together as commentators on the ABC television coverage of the 1968 political conventions.

VANCOUVER — Former UBC president Dr. Kenneth Hare became a director of Resources for the Future Inc. of Washington, D.C., an organization studying resource problems.

With new CAREFREE Tampons, you can go anywhere and stay out longer. Read below and find out how it's now possible.

Johnson & Johnson introduces CAREFREE* Tampons — a new concept in sanitary protection.

CAREFREE is an entirely new kind of tampon—much smaller than any tampon ever made, yet amazingly, it protects up to 3 hours longer.

Johnson & Johnson has developed CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. CAREFREE is, in fact, safe for up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.

Another remarkable feature of the CAREFREE Tampon is that it is truly disposable. No more rigid cardboard tube to get rid of. CAREFREE comes without an applicator because it doesn't need one. There's just a neat, compact tampon in a cellophane wrapper.

What are other women doing about sanitary protection?

According to research studies conducted in Canada, the use of tampons is growing rapidly. Their use is widely accepted, particularly among the younger, more sophisticated women. In this group, the majority of women use tampons.

Most women think that tampons are indeed a good idea. But they worry about the reliability of present products, particularly when it comes to using them during the entire period. (Some women are so concerned that they use both tampons and napkins.) But such precautions are completely unnecessary with new CAREFREE Tampons.

*Trademark of JOHNSON & JOHNSON or Affiliated Companies

Higher absorbency

CAREFREE Tampons' greater absorbency results from a unique quality. While the traditional tampon expands lengthwise, the CAREFREE Tampon expands, logically enough, in width—as the flow requires. This gentle expansion causes the tampon to mould itself to the body contours so it's accident-proof.

Exhaustive clinical tests and actual use among 3,720 women have proven that CAREFREE Tampons can be worn, with complete assurance, even during days when the flow is heaviest.

New CAREFREE Tampons are truly disposable

The cumbersome applicator that you get with ordinary tampons is a thing of the past. CAREFREE doesn't have an applicator because it doesn't need one. It is compact, smooth and firm enough to be inserted easily without one. And this makes CAREFREE a truly disposable tampon.

CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon there is—so small you can hide one in the palm of your hand. So small you can even put a dozen of them in your most fashionable bag and still have room for all that you usually carry. (A whole box of CAREFREE Tampons takes up no more room than a small pack of cigarettes.)

Once they've tried CAREFREE Tampons women are quick to recognize their many great advantages. They're the only significant improvement in sanitary protection in years.

Estate Tax Survives Big Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday the government will review later this year the much-criticized revision of gift and death taxes and make technical changes as necessary.

Following Benson's personal assurance to the Senate banking and commerce committee, the senators narrowly approved the bill without amendment.

On a division forced by Conservative opponents, the committee voted for the bill 9 to 7 with five abstentions.

Bill C-165, heralded in Benson's budget last October and passed in the Commons against Conservative opposition in February, goes now for expected passage into law in the Senate.

The legislation will exempt

Pressure Mounts To Limit Debates

OTTAWA (CP) — In the light of a Creditiste filibuster against the government's Criminal Code amendments, new Liberal pressures are mounting for some form of time allocation in the Commons.

Liberal House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said in an interview Wednesday he hopes the Commons procedure committee "will be in a position to do something about this by the end of May."

PUSHING FOR RULE

Mary Liberal back-benchers are known to be pushing for some rule, or agreement, that will prevent a recurrence of the present debate, which shows no signs of abating in the face of a sustained Creditiste attack against proposed changes in abortion laws.

When the government brought in its legislation last year to streamline the rules of Parliament there was a clause—the controversial 16A—which would have limited debates, but it was withdrawn "in order to get agreement on the other changes. This clause would have allowed the government House leader to set a time limit on debates if all-party agreement could be reached."

NO PLANS

Macdonald said Wednesday there are no plans to resurrect 16A, which he described as "slightly encompassing." He said it might be possible to reach agreement on some modified rules.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau made it clear in the Commons that the government had no plans to postpone further debate on the Criminal Code amendments.

Conservative Leader Stanfield had suggested that debate be postponed, or else the government agree to keep the Commons sitting beyond its scheduled June 27 adjournment for summer recess.

AVOIDS EITHER

Trudeau said he wouldn't give undertakings for either of these suggestions. The House had to accept responsibility for the delay.

Stanfield had suggested that the current debate be postponed so that "urgent" legislation, including the dealing with housing, could be dealt with.

There are only 17 days left for government business prior to June 27.

from tax estates willed to a widow but raise tax rates on large estates passed to others or when passed on to children from the widow.

The bill would also increase the tax on gifts from $2,000 a year to plug a loophole whereby death taxes have been evaded by distributing the estate before death.

FOR CRITICS

Benson told critics on the Senate committee that only 5 per cent of all Canadians who die have tax assessed against their estates.

Among the technicalities raised by the committee was an interpretation that the bill would lead to taxation of an estate left to a widow with the residue to a charity on her death.

Another involved the possibility of higher-than-intended rates of tax on the residue of an estate left to children of a first marriage by a widow who had remarried and inherited a second estate.

TECHNICALITY

Benson said the point on charitable bequests could be corrected when the legislation was opened to review. In the meantime, he said his department would make sure "no one is caught by this technicality."

Of the remarriage technicality, he agreed with a smile that legislation "shouldn't encourage people to live in sin" and the law "should ultimately be changed" on that point.

Those and other technicalities could be reviewed and possibly altered later this year, Benson said.

WELL PUBLICIZED

Senator Hayden said the pledge should be well publicized and Benson agreed.

On other issues, the finance minister declined to budge. Senator Lazarus Phillips (L-Quebec) protested that the bill would result in discrimination against Quebec on the ground that under a Quebec law couples would not be as free as in other provinces to offset estate tax by gifts between spouses before death.

Benson said that was an "unfortunate quirk" of Quebec law he hoped would be changed. The finance minister also turned down a request to write a trial limit into the bill or to extend the time limit—now Aug. 1—when exemptions under present legislation could still be claimed.

Political Interns in Commons Next Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Political interns will begin working on Parliament Hill next year.

With a $222,000 grant from the Donner Canadian Foundation, the long-advocated project of Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington) will become a reality in the fall of 1970, when 10 young Canadians move on to the Hill to begin their nine-month internship.

"Young doctors intern in hospitals, and young lawyers article in law offices," said Hales Wednesday. "Why shouldn't young political scientists serve an internship here?"

LONG PUSH

After three years of pushing his project, Hales saw his idea accepted recently by the Commons committee on procedure and organization. The project was recommended to the Commons where it was adopted.

At a news conference Wednesday, Hales and Gordon Blair (L—Grenville-Carleton), chairman of the committee, announced that the Donner foundation had agreed to cover the cost of the program for an experimental three years. Each of the 30 interns will be paid $6,000, plus travelling expenses, for his tour of duty here.

The Donner foundation, established by the late Henry Donner, a United States steel magnate, has been operating in the U.S. for some 40 years. The Donner Canadian Foundation was established in 1950.

Hales said the program has two purposes—to enable students to supplement their academic training with a working knowledge of Parliament, and to assist MPs in research work. He said the assignments would normally go to graduate students in political science, law or journalism.

The Canadian Political Science Association is supporting the program. During the three-year experimental period the program will be administered by a three-man committee, headed by a representative of the association. Other members will include an MP, and someone nominated by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

"It's very important that the program be very well run initially," said Blair. If the intern was misused, or he didn't have enough time for his own research, the purpose would be destroyed.

"And if this word got around in the first year, the program would be dead."

The duties of the intern will be decided by the committee, but Hales said they will include some time with a staff member of the Commons, and perhaps service with two MPs. He said the logical MPs to receive help are chairmen of standing committees and caucus committees.

When the committee recommended the program, it said that the taxpayers should never have to bear the major part of its expense.

Teens Get to 'Fantastic Kisser'

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA (Special) —
"Fantastic Kisser!"

The ecstatic scream soared high and clear over the squeals and squeals of delight, the swooning oohs and ahs that filled the vaulted rotunda of the House of Commons just a step beyond the chamber's doors.

Prime Minister Trudeau was caught up in a whirlpool of 150 charisma-crazed teens, most of them girls who had outflanked the Commons protective staff and captured him the instant he came out of the House after Wednesday's daily question period.

That "fantastic kisser" was the astonished tribute of a girl — or it could have been her mother — to the prime minister's expertise in the romantics of the embrace.

It was the greatest mob scene yet in the corridors of Parliament which have become pretty blasé about mob scenes since "Trudeau came to power."

Daily, week in, week out when the House has been at work, the hundreds of students have lined up, in long quiet queues in the halls, patiently waiting to file by shifts into the galleries.

They troop through the main doors, are taken in charge by the Commons guards, marshalled into their battalions, marched in good order to the gallery doors and repeatedly "shushed" in the long wait outside.

But Wednesday was different.

This group of 150 students from an English-speaking school in Montreal's Levee constituency had the great good fortune of having a special guide who obviously knew the Centre Block ropes.

He was one of their teachers, Jean D'Amour, who just happened to be a member of the board of directors of the Liberal Federation. And he sent them in an end-run around the Commons guards through the widely spinning revolving door of the VIP entrance.

***
This door customarily is reserved for the likes of prime ministers, cabinet members and opposition leaders, but the kids had it whirling so fast, none of the guards dared stop it for fear of a human log jam.

When the door stopped spinning, there were the Trudeau-stunned students waiting to pounce on their idol the second he emerged.

With about as much success as Canute had with the sea, D'Amour bellowed for order. Across the clamoring rotunda the television crews twiddled their thumbs and Conservative leader Stanfield and House leader Macdonald waited in the waiting glare of the lights to be seen and heard.

But nobody could be heard nor anyone seen as long as the pious pipe of 24 Sussex Drive was doing his thing.

Finally as he circled around the rotunda, edging toward the stairs to his office, the guards managed to move in, and with the press secretary, former football star Vic Champman, running interference, he shook off the mass tackle.

'Pity CPR' Doesn't Rate

OTTAWA (CP) — "Pity the CPR," said Pat Mahoney (L.-Calgary South) Wednesday when the world's largest transportation system asked to be excused from paying a $300 parliamentary charge for submitting a private bill late in the session.

***
The railway needs Commons and Senate approval of a bill authorizing it to build a branch line to carry Alberta coal to the new Roberts Bank super port near Vancouver, for export to Japan. CPR has more than $2,000,000,000 in assets.

Jeffrey King, an Ottawa lawyer, told the Commons miscellaneous private bills committee that the CPR could not get its petition for the bill into the parliamentary mill before the deadline last fall because of negotiations the CPR had to undertake with B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, and others.

B.C. Hydro did not get authority from the provincial legislature to negotiate a deal with the CPR until after the Commons deadline passed, and so the CPR should not be charged the $300 late-filing fee, he said. The delay was "totally beyond" the fault of the railway.

***
"Pity the CPR," said Mahoney. "I move the usual motion." The railway was assessed the $300.

MP or Activist: Pick Best Way To Social Change?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Who represents the better way of making social change: Len Marchand, the first Indian member of Parliament or Indian activist Kahn-Tineta Horn?

About 80 delegates to the National Council of Jewish Women's convention met 200 community and government representatives Wednesday to discuss tradition, forms of citizenship versus direct action.

Chairman John Woods of the political science department at the University of Calgary asked whether a good citizen tolerates and supports a dehumanizing society or whether it is his responsibility to smash something in protest.

OPPOSITE EXTREMES
Len Marchand, MP for Kamloops-Caribou, and Miss Horn of the Caughnawaga Indian reserve near Montreal represent opposite extremes of political action, said Margaret Guerin, councillor of the Musqueam reserve in Vancouver. She opted for a middle road.

In discussion, delegates seemed to feel that direct action such as supermarket boycotts or student occupation of Sir George Williams University in Montreal may not be the best way of participating. But confrontation is the only recourse for many Canadians who are "subjects" rather than citizens.

"We, in this room, in terms of income and level of education are best equipped to deal with problems in traditional ways," said Henry Rosenthal of the department of extension at University of British Columbia. Boycotts are a means for many Canadians to draw attention to a problem.

Money means power, said Myra Paperny of Calgary. She suggested that money would wield less influence on government if political parties were supported by taxation rather than by donations from individuals and corporations.

BOOM NECESSARY
Sarah Black, a Toronto delegate, said young people may have to make a booming noise to allow themselves to be heard as citizens.

When all traditional channels are closed, confrontations are useful if they represent a genuine need, said Mrs. Norman O'Levy of Vancouver. But when streets, society runs the danger of repeating the Germany of 1933.

Charge Hangs On Age Of Man

Court Parade

Is bearded and homeless John Geddes 72? Or is he really 65? Geddes' freedom may depend on the answer.

He pleaded not guilty Wednesday before Magistrate William Ostler to a vagrancy charge in Central Magistrate's Court, and said he was 72.

"Well, Mr. MacIntyre," the magistrate asked of Crown counsel John MacIntyre after the testimony was concluded, "what is an aged person?"

REASONABLE

Mr. MacIntyre said he felt 72 would seem a reasonable definition of aged in Geddes' case. Under the Criminal Code of Canada, someone deemed aged cannot be convicted of an offence.

The charge against Geddes was dismissed.

The possibility that Geddes is 65 years old cropped up during the case that followed. This concerned William Howard, 19, who was also charged with vagrancy when arrested with Geddes.

BELIEVED 65

Police testimony linking the two dislodged the arresting officer considered Geddes to be 65.

Magistrate Ostler indicated he might not have been ready to accept the aged definition if he thought Geddes was 65.

"If he has lied about his age, that is a matter for you to consider," he told Mr. MacIntyre.

After court, Mr. MacIntyre said he had asked police to pick Geddes up again if they saw him and lay another charge of vagrancy.

ACTUAL AGE

What might happen after that would depend on what came out in court concerning his actual age, Mr. MacIntyre said.

The charge against the younger man was withdrawn. He said he was intoxicated when arrested and had given police a false story and wrong name. He actually lived at 639 Dunedin with his wife, son and parents, he said.

Geddes and Howard were found sitting in a doorway in the 500 block Johnson at 11:10 p.m. Tuesday. They had no money.

Robert D. Goad, described by Magistrate Ostler as a young man with an engaging personality, was sentenced to one year in jail on a false pretences charge arising out of a worthless cheque cashed at the F. W. Woolworth Co.

The cheque was for $55.

He was also sentenced to one year concurrent on each of seven charges of false pretences involving cheques made out for less than $50.

Goad lived at 132 Wildwood.

Frederick B. Sexton, Jr., of 2708 Claude, was sentenced to six to 12 months for breach of recognizance. The sentence is to run concurrently with a six-to-12-month term imposed Tuesday. The first sentence followed conviction on a charge of breaking out of the Broad Street Youth Centre last Oct. 14. Sexton had hidden inside the centre after it closed. A vending machine was rifled of money.

Lorna Sewell, 19, of 578 Obed, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and was remanded on $500 bail to May 15 for sentence.

Robert E. Brown of 726 Goldstream was sentenced to six months for driving while his licence was suspended. Robert R. Gattinger of 4341 Harder was fined $50 for a similar offence.

Martin Powers of HMCS Qu'Appelle was fined $350 for impaired driving. A $50 fine was imposed on George Rose of HMCS St. Croix for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Seven Families Flee Flooding

TRAIL (CP)—Seven families who live along Nigger Bar Creek were evacuated from their homes because of the danger of flooding caused by an overflow from Violin Lake, Trail's water reservoir.

The Trail flood control committee advised U.S. authorities at Northport, Wash., near the border that Violin Lake was filled to capacity and water was spilling over an earthen dam at its south end.

New York harbor, led by many tugs, welcomes newest Queen

Queen Hailed in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Queen Elizabeth 2 sailed into town on her maiden voyage Wednesday—four months late for her first date with New York City.

A tremendous harbor welcome greeted the 68,863-ton QE2, after her trip across the Atlantic with 1,400 passengers and eight dogs.

Capt. William Warwick said the crossing time from Le Havre Lightship in France to Ambrose Lightship just outside New York Harbor was four days 16 hours 39 minutes.

The $78,000,000 flagship of Britain's merchant fleet entered the Hudson River and, in the welcoming words of Mayor John Lindsay, moved "right into the heart of New York."

Fireboats arched sprays beside her. Helicopters overhead saluted her in staccato. Confetti swirled from lower Manhattan skyscrapers. A flotilla of small craft bobbed about her massive bulk, like dolphins.

Thousands waiting at the pier waved and smiled greetings. Flags and signs of welcome beaded the waterfront and many in the waiting throng waved small Union Jacks and American flags.

About a dozen pickets from the American-Irish Action Committee marched outside the ship's pier protesting what they called England's occupation of Northern Ireland. They carried signs reading, "Civil Rights, a Must for Ireland," and shouted "England, get out of Ireland!"

Trimmer, shorter, daintier than her predecessors, the QE2 was to have made her maiden voyage Jan. 17. But her engines acted up on a shakedown cruise and her owners, the Cunard Steamship Co. Ltd., refused to accept her delivery until things were corrected.

Another Transatlantic Record

Jet Smashes Five-Hour Barrier

LONDON (UPI) — A Royal Navy Phantom jet set a world record Wednesday, flying across the Atlantic in four hours, 53 minutes and 10 seconds in the trans-Atlantic air race.

The Phantom's flight from Floyd Bennett Field in New York to Witley, England, shaved 10 minutes off the record established last Sunday, also by a Royal Navy jet in same race.

The Phantom's pilot, Lieut. Hugh Drake, set a point-to-point speed record as well in his total time between the Empire State Building in New York and the top of post office tower in London. He covered the distance in five hours, 19 minutes and 16 seconds. The time was 11 minutes faster than that of Royal Navy Lieut. Paul Waterhouse on Sunday.

A parrot named Peter, another Royal Navy entry, left the tower with Leading Seaman Stewart Dow and Howard Evans.

"The public thinks of a Jack (sailor) as a chap with a kit bag and parrot," said Dow, 24.

"We're just promoting the image," he added. The tortoise, wrapped in a red scarf, set off with Tom Ravensdale, a London aquarium owner. "The last time a tortoise went in a race it won handsomely," Ravensdale said.

For many of the contestants the trickiest part of the air and ground race was getting from the congested top of the post office tower and into an elevator for the first leg of the journey.

"Hold the lift, hold the lift," shouted one entry running down the narrow corridor and almost bowling over an elegant Royal Navy admiral. Among the Americans leading in different competitive categories are navy commander Bill Wright of Floyd Bennett Field, N.Y., for an unsponsored trip, and Vladimir Kazan of Wellesley Hills, Mass., for a 23-hour, 35-minute crossing in a Piper plane.

Richard Selph of Sandy Hook, Conn., leads in subsonic crossings from London to New York with a seven-hour, six-minute time. C. N. Cooke of Stamford, Conn., leads in the same class on the New York to London run with a seven-hour, 16-minute time.

One of Wednesday's more breathless arrivals was performed by Garcia, an East Brunswick, N.J., resident, who skated to the tower.

Garcia, 32, caught a commercial flight after crashing in his plane in a Pennsylvania chicken pen. He was uninjured. "Well, I am alive and here," Garcia said as he rolled past the crowds milling on Maple Street outside the grey-green curved tower dominating the London landscape. Garcia, whose time was eight hours, seven minutes, said, "I'd been over the Atlantic instead of Pennsylvania, I'd probably be swimming now."

A variety of planes and 390 professional aviators and nonfliers from both sides of the Atlantic are competing in the week-long race. There are numerous categories and 21 prizes worth $144,000.

Train Collision Injures 33

CALCUTTA (AP)—Two persons were killed and 33 injured when a passenger train rammed into a stationary railway engine at a station near eastern India's Gaudhati City. The two dead were firemen of the passenger train whose engine and two coaches were derailed.

Mainland Dock Under Repair

VANCOUVER (CP) — Horse-shoe Bay ferry dock, rammed by a provincial government ferry, will be back in service in three or four weeks after completion of $100,000 worth of repairs including new pilings and readjustment of hydraulic equipment.

STARTING MAY 16th ...

20-hour overnight cruise every other day aboard the mv "QUEEN of PRINCE RUPERT"

NORTHBOUND Leaves Kelsey Bay, Vancouver Island, 1:30 pm from May 16th.

SOUTHBOUND Leaves Prince Rupert 12:30 pm from May 17th.

Explore over 330 miles of the world's most scenic coastline this summer. Sail past mountains that drop at your feet into the sea, past turquoise lagoons, coves and dreaming islands. Clear away the city cobwebs with pure air cooled by snow-lined peaks and the salt zest of the sea.

You can drive, bus or walk aboard B.C.'s own "Queen of Prince Rupert" at Kelsey Bay, Vancouver Island and, 20 hours later, arrive pampered, refreshed and well-fed at Prince Rupert. You may decide to lay over and take the return cruise—or drive back home through the land of the tall totems and the Cariboo. If driving doesn't appeal to you, your travel agent can offer interesting coach and airline packages plus fine accommodation.

This summer, plan to enjoy endless beauty and hospitality aboard the "Queen of Prince Rupert."

FALL TO SPRING: After September 30th, two north and southbound cruises each week—with a 25% reduction in rates.

Old Records Full of Appeal

By BILL THOMAS

"People have a completely wrong idea about old gramophone records and their value," said William E. John, who should know. He has more than 15,000 in his collection that he has catalogued, and many, many more piled in corners of his basement.

The professional photographer is still busy collecting, but he finds dealers have had ideas about the value of old records.

"They are really worthless because there are very few rarities. Records were made to be mass produced, and they were. There are thousands of them still around."

"People imagine that records by Caruso, for example, are rare. He made so many and there are still so many around they are worth about five cents, or a dime at the most."

"It's more accurate to describe old records as interesting rather than rare. There is also the problem of playing them. It is disastrous to try playing them on modern equipment. The old North American discs had their grooves filled with powdered pumice to wear down the needle and to protect the record. This stuff clogs the stylus on a modern tone arm. European records didn't have them, but they were played with wood or fibre needles."

"I have at least 15 old players. I don't actually collect the machines, but I have them for playing different records. The oldest I have is a 1905 Columbia. I bought it in parts. I got some bits at auctions and the horn in a Nanaimo junk store."

"My father bought my mother an Edison Diamond Disc for her wedding present in 1915. I still have it, and it works well."

"I still find people who have interesting records in their basements. This is the best place to get them. The few that go to auctions and junk stores get handled so often they are all too often damaged."

"For my part, I never sell a record to anyone. I have a good many duplicates and I like to swap them or give them away to others who are interested in old records."

"The numbers that I am particularly fond of, I tape in this way I can enjoy a number of selections that I like, without the problem of cranking up a machine.

"It also allows me to filter out some of the bias and background noise."

Mr. John carried on a running commentary on his collection as he put on some of the records.

"Take this old version of The Preacher and the Bear. It looks old and some people might think it has value, but it doesn't. The Arthur Collins version was first issued in 1902, but it was still available and in the catalogue right up to the time the 78 rpm records went out in the late 1950s."

The collections includes such stars as Gloria Swanson, Peter Dawson, Al Fawcett, Helen Kane (the original Boop-a-Doop Girl), Nellie Wallace, Florrie Forde, most of the great opera singers and a record of Quentin Reynolds doing one of his wartime broadcasts.

Mr. John is not just collecting for the sake of collecting. He listens to the music he collects, and enjoys most of it. His collection of country music is quite comprehensive and covers most of the early stars, including Canada's Wilf Carter.

He also has a number of Edison cylinder records, but these are not his specialty. He says he is always happy to hear from people who have old records.

One of his major problems right now is getting steel needles to play his records. They are no longer made, and he has to look for a supply.

McCarthy Chooses Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem. Minn.) emerged from a cocoon of silence Wednesday to tab Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts as the current best bet for the Democratic party's 1972 presidential nomination.

The Minnesota senator, who made an unsuccessful bid for the 1968 nomination, also:

● Left the door open to changing his position that he will not run for re-election to the Senate in his party's ticket next year.

● Criticized President Nixon or urging college presidents to rack down on campus demonstrators.

● Said the Nixon administration is not pushing hard enough or a settlement of the Vietnam war, but offered no specific suggestions.

● Pledged to work in the current session of Congress for a revision of the military draft, which he said is shot through with "injustices and irrationality."

McCarthy broke his public silence of several weeks in response to questions on a record CBS radio program, Capitol Joakroom.

The Minnesota senator, giving very indication he doesn't believe he will be in the running for a presidential nomination three years from now, said that in the early book, the best place to put your money is on Kennedy as the Democratic opponent for Nixon.

As for his own future, McCarthy said he doesn't see much possibility that he will change his announced decision not to seek re-election as Senator. But he added that some circumstances he did not anticipate could change his position.

McCarthy, who ran for the presidential nomination last year with strong student support, said of campus disturbances:

EASIER JOB

"I don't think any good is served by having the president and the attorney-general telling college presidents to crack down on student demonstrators. This is not a presidential matter. It is much easier to be president of the United States today than to be president of a college."

McCarthy said the Nixon administration "could press more vigorously for a negotiated settlement" in Vietnam, added he is not for U.S. troop withdrawals until the South Vietnamese government troops can take on a greater role.

King Fisherman

In Right Place at Right Time

Last year's King Fisherman Contest Vancouver Island Helicopters trip winner has a good chance of catching the biggest trout of this year's contest. At least he is going to be in the right place at the right time.

Herman Terison and his fishing partner Bert Dodd will fly into Nahmint Lake May 24 and 25 to be guests of Vic Dawson at his fishing cabin on that lake, which at this time of year produces some of the biggest rainbow trout to come from Island waters.

STILL SLOW

But Mr. Dawson reports fishing on Nahmint is still slow. The ice has only just left the lake and there is snow at the edges. By May 24 the lake should provide hot fishing.

Mr. Terison won his helicopter trip with a 7.8-pound coho from Pedder Bay.

Another big winner from last year starts his holiday prize of a lifetime this week.

OFF TO HAWAII

Eileen and Bill Stephenson take off aboard a Canadian Pacific Airline jet Friday afternoon, bound for a week in Hawaii.

Mr. Stephenson won his trip for two with a 6.12-pound spring (chinook) salmon, also caught at Pedder Bay.

All the major King Fisherman prizes are hidden weight draws, so it pays to subscribe to the Colonist and enter as many fish as you can, because each fish means another chance at the big prizes.

Take-Home or Strike Pay
'People's Choice in B.C.

SUMMERLAND (CP) — Premier Bennett, again denying that a provincial election campaign is under way, Tuesday night said the people of British Columbia have a choice between "strike pay with Berger or take-home pay with Bennett—that will be the issue."

He made the statement and reference to Opposition leader Tom Berger in a speech to an audience of about 300 in the Summerland High School as he continued what he has termed his "look-see" tour of the province.

The premier said, "I am happy to speak to you because we are not in an election campaign."

Amid laughter from the audience, the premier added, "You never develop the harvest until you have first planted the seed and cultivated it too, so I don't know what the press is all excited about."

He said some outstanding businessmen in Vancouver who had previously opposed Social Credit are now supporting the party and indeed, "they going to run for us."

Premier Bennett defended film The Good Life, an "every time you make a film there are bound to be critics."

The premier made his mark at a Chamber of Commerce dinner here where film was shown. Opposition Democrat and Liberal spokesmen have charged that the film constituted a waste and misuse of public funds for political purposes in boosting the image of Social Credit government.

Trail Aid

National Drive Planned

TRAIL (CP) — The Trail flood relief committee Wednesday said a national campaign will be held to raise funds to cover costs of damage in a flash flood here April 23.

Chairman R. G. Anderson of the government-appointed committee said the $3,000,000 damage estimate does not include damage to city property, which is a matter between the city and the province.

The B.C. government has indicated it will cover 60 per cent of the $3,000,000.

NO WORD YET

There has been no final word from Ottawa on requests for federal financial assistance. In the Commons Wednesday, Prime Minister Trudeau said several Western provinces have requested flood assistance but he understands that final damage estimates have not been made.

Ottawa would wait for estimates before making decisions. About $28,000 has been donated to the Trail fund by individuals and other municipalities.

Fisheries Council:

Limit Foreigners In Coastal Ports

TORONTO (CP) — Extension of federal restrictions on foreign fishing vessels using Canadian ports was urged Wednesday by the Fisheries Council of Canada.

In a series of resolutions passed at its annual meeting, the trade association urged that foreign fishing supply vessels, previously permitted to land for supplies, be included in a present ban on foreign fishing vessels from using Canadian ports "except in dire emergency."

It also asked that the ban under the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, be extended to cover Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, where present regulations permit foreign fishing vessels to enter port.

Increased yields for Canadian fishermen and greater safeguards for the industry were mentioned as benefits of such a move.

ACROSS COUNTRY
The council, with 17 local associations across Canada in all provinces except Alberta and Manitoba, also urged that federal regulations be enforced to make sure offshore oil operations do not damage marine resources.

Another resolution asked provincial and federal governments to make sure industrial and domestic wastes do not harm fisheries and that the federal government become more actively involved in pollution control and formulation of a national water policy. Also recommended was greater financial aid from senior governments for treatment of municipal sewage.

BAY OF FUNDY
The council also asked the federal government to prohibit herring fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy except for Canadian-registered fishing vessels.

Other resolutions approved ask the federal government to:

B.C. SALMON

Also urged was federal aid in setting up a program of controlled flow channels for salmon in British Columbia and building hatcheries in the province's Gulf of Georgia area for coho and chinook salmon; removal of the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on margarine which includes marine oils, and greater use of fish in Canadian foreign aid programs.

The four-day annual meeting, attended by more than 400 delegates, ended Wednesday.

In 'Space'

One-Year Test Success

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Soviet scientist said Tuesday three Russians have survived a full year in a room-size simulated spacecraft on dried food and water reconstituted from breath and urine.

They tried to regenerate their used oxygen, he said, but had to add 30 per cent during the experiment, which ran a year from November 1967.

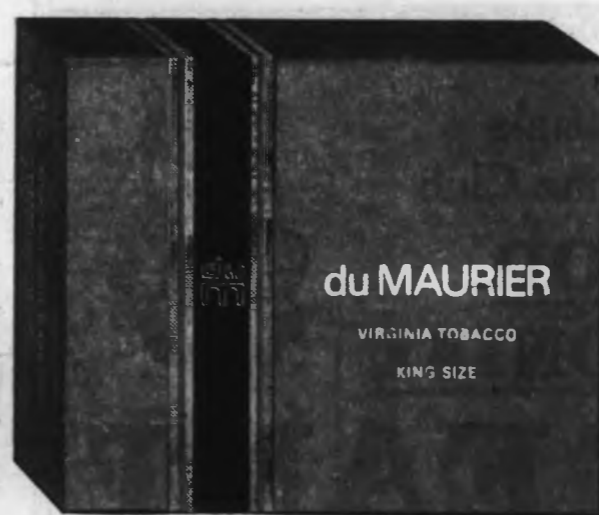

Boris Adamovich, physiologist for the ministry of health in the Soviet Union, told of the experiment at the annual meeting of the Aerospace Medical Association. He said:

"Our conclusion is that men can live for up to a year in a spacecraft environment. The subjects worked and thought efficiently throughout."

The longest closed-cabin test reported in the United States has been about two months.

Adamovich said the three grew cabbage and other greens in a small greenhouse attached to the simulated spacecraft, but this supplied only one-per-cent of their total food.

Executive Sounds Warning:

TV Obsolete in 1970s?

TORONTO (UPI) — Television has become middle-aged and middle-class in outlook and major North American networks face the possibility of becoming "obsolete" in the 1970s if they don't make adjustments, a leading Canadian broadcasting executive said Wednesday.

Eugene Hallman, the CBC's vice-president in charge of English-language programs, said the networks soon will have to compete with "burgeoning" cable television and other services for the viewer's attention.

With developing technology, the future viewer will be able to turn his television set, or "receiver system," into a play-back device for film, video tape, sound records or home movies, in addition to network television.

The networks might just not provide the best option for the viewer, who may demand "program control of television."

"Television networks and stations, technologically speaking, are middle-aged," Hallman said. "The 70's are going to test the great television networks of North America. They may already be going obsolete in both economic and service terms."

Emphasis on Bad News Making Public Restless

OTTAWA (CP) — Public Canada Safety Council conven- tion that public criticism is media in Canada has much- directed mainly against the tendency of newspapers, radio and television to cover only "negative or bad news."

Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, said that he had told 200 delegates to the the last year by a tremendous number of responsible people about the amount of bad news as opposed to good news."

He said the media's "extensive" coverage of domestic violence in North America may be leading to the "internal destruction of society" and the creation of a "joyless existence."

Boyle, a former broadcaster and journalist, was replying to statements by delegates who said traffic safety was given too little attention by the media while more colorful safety campaigns, especially in the areas of air and water pollution, received wide coverage.

But the public must examine its own attitudes when criticizing the news media, perhaps public tastes, not the attitudes of those engaged in presenting the news, are responsible for any distortion of the news, he said.

Scientists say that the air pressure on the planet Venus may be 75 times greater than on earth.

Ratings, Broadcasters Under Fire

From UPI, CP

OTTAWA — A blast at ratings and both public and private broadcasters has been issued Monday by Pierre Juneau, chairman of the new Canadian Radio Television Commission, in a speech to the Association of Canadian Advertisers convention.

He said the CBC does not do enough to foster national unity and "make one end of the country know what the other is thinking," while private broadcasters are not doing much better.

"Devoting most of his words to ratings, he said those in both private and public fields who want broadcasting policy determined by ratings are against the commission objective to 'safeguard, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.'"

He said, however, that "fortunately... there is reason to believe broadcasters in general have decided to take a positive attitude toward broadcasting in Canada... and consider themselves an integral part of the Canadian broadcasting system."

It is a "very powerful tactic," Juneau added, to "appeal to the citizen as a consumer and also to add up all his choices and consider the total as the summary of his political option."

"However, it is a dangerous tactic... Even as a consumer, a man has short term choices and long term choices and there may be conflicts between the two..."

"But there is a more serious problem: men are not only consumers. And I wonder if, paradoxically the media — broadcasting certainly, but also newspapers and magazines — have not played a very important role in bringing out this fact... every four minutes, on the average, television has called attention to the things, they also worry about Vietnam, about racial violence and the future of the mainland Chinese.

"Then every day at eleven o'clock, it has referred to poverty, discrimination, injustice, war, misery, social chaos..."

Juneau warned the advertisers the 1969 consumer was "not a complacent one anymore." He said that, while people watch Laugh-In and buy amenities, the pleasures of the luxurious life offered for consumption.

HAZARIBAGH (Reuters) — At least 30 persons were reported killed and 150 injured by a violent hailstorm in the Hazaribagh district of the north Indian state of Bihar. Several hundred houses collapsed or had their roofs blown off and numerous trees were uprooted in the storm.

Ferry with 54 Flips in Storm

CALCUTTA (Reuters) — Twenty-six persons were feared drowned in a ferry boat disaster in India. Hooghly River upstream from Calcutta, police said. The ferry, carrying 54 persons, was caught in a storm in midstream and capsized.

Bus Plunge Kills 15

SEOUL (UPI) — A bus skidded off a bridge and plunged into a rain-swollen river carrying 15 persons to their death in Kwangju City, 170 miles south of Seoul, Korean press reports said.

Teacher Balks at Censor's Role

PORT ALBERNI — Hilda Kellington, a 24-year-old teacher of English, said Wednesday night she had been removed as sponsor of a local high school paper, The Phoenix.

She said she was taken off the job because she refused to censor the publication.

Mike Rutian, a 17-year-old grade 12 student and a co-editor of The Phoenix, said earlier that the school principal, Norman Burgess, last week recalled 1,000 copies of the Alberni district secondary school paper and ordered the front page destroyed because of what he termed obscene and possibly libellous material.

Mr. Burgess was not available for comment but vice principal Bill Marshall confirmed that the students were told one story was possibly dangerous and another did not belong in the paper.

Rutian said the principal had allowed publication of a second edition Tuesday after offensive words were deleted from an article about the Chinese cultural revolution and a front-page story implying Alberni students were drinking heavily.

He said the principal had demanded removal of Mrs. Kellington for alleged irresponsibility in allowing the students to publish the material.

Rutian said the students were told they could continue to publish the school paper provided Mrs. Kellington was removed, the number of pages was reduced, the paper's radical content was softened and provided the paper stressed the positive, not the negative, aspects of the school.

Earlier this year, The Phoenix was awarded a shield by the University of B.C.'s student newspaper for being the best high school paper in B.C.

Mr. Marshall said it was the usual practice for the principal to approve each edition of the paper before it was put out for distribution. The paper is published four times a year.

He said, "No principal likes to be a censor. However, Mr. Burgess felt the editors had mistaken freedom of licence and had taken people's names and job futures into their own hands, which no one has a right to do."

B.C. Trustees Ask UVic Senate Seat

The B.C. School Trustees Association asked Wednesday for representation on the University of Victoria senate.

The senate tabled for study a letter from James Campbell of Saturna Island, president of the BCSTA, who said trustee senators would be "highly desirable."

The request, also going to the University of British Columbia and Simon Fraser University, is part of the BCSTA's campaign for an increased voice for school trustees in major educational decisions.

ONE OR MORE
The Universities Act allows a campus senate to include one or more representatives "elected by any society or group or organization in the province which in the opinion of the senate contributes in a significant way to the economic or cultural welfare of the province."

Fund Drive Reaches $18,700

A fund drive by the Queen Alexandra Solarium Junior League reached the $18,700 mark Wednesday night in the final night of active canvassing.

The campaign, with a $35,000 goal, is being ended because of the start of the Salvation Army's fund drive, according to Mrs. R. J. Nickels, publicity chairman.

Mrs. Pauline Atterbury, Jr., mother of a former Solarium patient, will set up a league collection booth at the Sooke Super Market May 16, 23 and 24.

Greater Victoria area residents missed by the canvassers may send donations to the Queen Alexandra Solarium, 2400 Arbutus Drive, in care of the Junior League. Contribution pickups may be arranged by calling Mrs. Ted Lunt at 382-2893.

Seal Back Fat And Sassy

Kiefl, the young seal who spent two days at large in the Inner Harbor after escaping from his pen at the Undersea Gardens, was back in custody Wednesday.

Kiefl got away Monday, and was caught Wednesday while sunning on a sea plane board ramp about 100 yards from home.

The young seal was described as fat and healthy.

Pupil Found In Coma

A 14-year-old student boy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital from Reynolds junior high school in a coma Wednesday afternoon with what police described as "an overdose of alcohol."

The boy was treated and released. Saanich police are investigating.

The Columbine

If you have a shaded spot in your garden, you could do a lot worse than establish a small colony of Aquilegia, the Columbine of Chaucer and Shakespeare and a favorite flower in grandmother's cottage garden.

I doubt if grandmother would recognize today's Columbines, though, for some of the newer hybrids make magnificent blooms as much as four inches across, and with spurs four inches long. They come in every imaginable color, too, and are not too difficult to grow from seed, blooming in their second year.

Aquilegia has the reputation of being a "buggy" plant — a reputation which I don't think is altogether justified.

It is true that two pests attack it, but you don't get anything like the menagerie of aphids, thrips, leaf-hoppers and other assorted critters that you would find on, say, a rose. Moreover, the two common pests of Aquilegia are fairly easy to control once you understand their habits.

One of these is the Columbine Leaf Miner, a tiny grub that tunnels through the tissues of the leaf, making a pale-colored serpentine trail zigzagging across the surface of the leaf.

If only a few leaves are so marked, better simply pick them off and burn them, and remember to cut down and burn the topgrowth during the autumn cleanup. Actually, if you are observant enough to spot an attack in its early stages, hand-picking is the simplest method of control.

In the past, spraying or dusting against the leaf miner hasn't been of much help once the tiny grub is holed up comfortably between the upper and lower surfaces of the leaf, for he is inside, where the bug-killers can't reach him.

With the advent of the new systemic insecticides — the kinds that are taken up in the sap of the plant — it isn't any trick at all to control this disfiguring pest. Gardol, Cygon, Ortho Rose and Flower Care and Isotox are all effective.

Another and much more serious enemy of the Aquilegia is the Columbine Borer, a fat pink caterpillar which enters the stem and eats his way down into the fleshy root, killing the plant. A reddish-brown moth is responsible, laying her eggs in the soil close to the plant. These hatch out in late spring, and the baby grubs make their way into the plant stems and down into the roots, growing prodigiously as they feed upon the plant's tissues.

Here again, there isn't very much you can do once the borer has taken up residence inside the root, and when you find a Columbine drooping and wilting mysteriously, you can be pretty sure one of these plump, salmon-colored caterpillars is in the roots.

Obviously, the only thing to do is dig it up and consign it to the incinerator before the grub can become a moth and lay more of her infernal eggs.

About the only time you can attack this enemy with any hope of success is just after the eggs hatch, while the tiny grublets are making their way across the short stretch of soil to the plant stems.

Before the days of modern soil insecticides, old-time gardeners made a routine practice of scraping up the surface soil around each pet Aquilegia and consigning it to the garden bonfire, replacing it with good topsoil taken from some other part of the garden. This was done in early spring, and in this way the unhatched eggs were destroyed before the plants were invaded.

Nowadays, the usual method is to scratch a little chlordane dust or bulb dust into the soil around each Columbine, or drench the soil with a chlordane or diazinon solution. This renders the soil lethal to the hatching grubs.

ART BUCHWALD

No Time to Teach

Prof. Harvey Yolick, Wimbledon professor of English studies at Bitter U., said he could only talk to me for a few moments about the new biography of Ernest Hemingway. When I came into his office he apologized.

"I'd love to talk to you about the Hemingway book, but unfortunately I have a confrontation with the Students for an Uplight University at three o'clock and then another confrontation with the Afro-Polish Society at four."

"Then there is a faculty meeting at six for the Ad Hoc Committee to Liberate the Dean, which is followed by an anti-war rally I have to attend at nine to defend the English department's use of Tolstoy's War and Peace as a textbook."

"If you're too busy today," I said, "I'll see you tomorrow."

Prof. Yolick looked at his calendar. "I'm afraid tomorrow doesn't look any better. I have a confrontation at eight o'clock in the Student Union with the Students Against Tomorrow."

"And there is a possibility that I will be called upon at noon as a mediator in a dispute over the faculty parking lot which the Radicals for Smaller Cars want abolished. Now, what did you want to ask me about Hemingway?"

"Well, Professor, as one of the outstanding experts on . . . The phone rang and Yolick picked it up. I tried not to overhear, but it was impossible not to listen.

"Yes, sir. You want me to attend the confrontation on Thursday with the Students for Lower Grades? I have a class at three. Well, you see, sir, I cancelled Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday's classes."

"I thought I might turn up Thursday and lecture, just to keep my hand in. You consider this more important? All right, I'll cancel the class. Yes, sir."

He hung up, and then pushed a buzzer. "Miss Samuels, would you make a note that I have a confrontation on Thursday at three o'clock with the Students for Lower Grades."

Miss Samuels' voice came over the speaker. "But, professor, you have a previous confrontation with the Moderate Radicals for a Restructured Renaissance Studies Program."

"We'll have to postpone that confrontation. The president wants me at the SLG confrontation instead."

Miss Samuels said, "Prof. Barley of the International School wants to know if you're keeping Friday open for the confrontation with the Graduate Instructions Grievance Committee."

"Damn, I forgot about that. What have I got on Friday?" "You have a confrontation with the Inter-Fraternity Headquarters Organization, the One Guevara Amnesty Committee and the Ho Chi Minh Revolutionary Movement."

"Tell Barley I'll try to make part of his confrontation, but I won't be able to stay if there is a strike."

Yolick turned to me. "Sorry about the interruption. Let me see. You wanted to know about Hemingway. I found Hemingway a very interesting character. He probably left more of a mark . . ."

A brick crashed through the window with a note on it. Yolick went over to pick it up. He read the note and said, "The New Left Anti-Defamation League wants me for a confrontation on Saturday. I was hoping to get some papers marked over the weekend."

"There's always Sunday," I said.

"No good. On Sunday I promised to meet with some students who want to abolish the Fourth of July."

"For an English professor, you seem to be quite busy." "It's all part of the teaching game," he said wearily.

Miss Samuels came in excitedly. "Professor, there is a group of students outside who want an immediate confrontation with you."

"You know I'm all booked up for confrontations. Who are they?"

"They're your students from your English literature course and they demand to know when you're coming back to class."

Prof. Yolick said, "Inform them that I'll try to be in class a week from Wednesday. In the meantime, tell them to reread Twenty-thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Rift Healed?

There has been no official word, but to judge from all the affectionate photographs, it seems as though Barbara Blomstedt and Elliott Gould have reconciled. I am reminded of when they met for David Mamet's play, I Can Get It For You Wholesale — Elliott as the star, Barbara in the small but effective role as Miss Marmelstein. Soon after the show opened, Elliott called Merrick and said, "Barbara's going to be a very big star and I'll be standing in the wings watching. I'm so jealous already, but I'm going to marry her." It has been a rocky ride for Gould, but he is a patient man. Barbara, incidentally, was paid $150 a week when she began the play. After the reviews, Merrick raised her to $400. He would have to add a couple of noughts to get her now.

Jean Simmons started her film career in Tahiti, in The Blue Lagoon. She is now in another lush playground, Nassau, starring with John Forsythe in The Happy Ending. They were visited recently by Katherine Ross and her boyfriend, ace cameraman Conrad Hall. Jean doesn't make too many films these days. She is the wife of director Richard Brooks. She worked harder when she was Mrs. Stewart Grainger. There was that big ranch in Arizona to be paid for.

Metropolitan opera baritone Robert Merrill tried to stand up in his living room, and fell down. The same thing happened when he was on a concert tour in Israel three years ago — his knee suddenly buckled under him. They wanted to rush him to a hospital for X-rays, but he decided then to wait until he returned to the United States and have his own doctor. When he did return, doctors discovered nothing wrong. Robert now wonders what, if anything, they will discover this time.

Degrees Not Enough

DR. STUART ROSENBERG

Not long ago it was possible to be regarded as an educated man by placing alphabetical combinations after our names — like BA, MA, or Ph.D.

Today, however, things are no longer the same. Yes, more and more people are pursuing the self-same alphabetical appellations thus creating the university explosion that is everywhere abundantly audible.

But intelligent people are no longer deceived by academic initials that are really little more than the equivalent of working papers in the contemporary labor market.

An educated man is somebody who never stopped studying — whether he ever went to school or not. Education leads on. It leads to education.

College degrees often mislead because they do not always lead on. Once we have completed the course. Consider what has happened to those who are misled to believe that they had completed the course.

Not many years ago our teachers — even the best of them — used to teach us to use "correct" grammar for our speaking and writing. Other professors imparted equally authoritative ideas of what was "good" or "bad" art, music, poetry or drama.

Our science lecturers were involved in handing down a "scientific" tradition. They thought of Science as if it were spelled with a capital "S", an unyielding body of unchanging truths, tested, verified and codified forever.

Truly educated men know now that none of these "verities" hold true any longer. "Correct" grammar — as if it were some revelation of a deity — is no longer taught. Instead, good education imparts "usage" and a more thorough, education teaches not one usage, but several,

Writers and artists, poets and dramatists are encouraged to break through to new and exciting ways of expression — to "break the rules" of grammar or traditional form, if by so doing, they achieve greater insight, clarity of thought, or vividness of expression.

Musicians have not only invented new shapes to sound, but have even developed new kinds of musical scales. Not only have they changed the building, they have re-shaped its foundations.

Nor is "good" painting necessarily realistic, photographic, impressionistic, or imitative of nature. It can now be any kind of structuring in line, mass and color, according to the individual and personal aesthetics of the artist and his viewers.

Science, too, is no longer regarded as fixed and final in its knowledge. We now speak of the "new mathematics," the "new physics."

Whole theories of knowledge once regarded as "scientifically sound" are regularly replaced because they are now seen as "obsolete."

In the United States alone, the National Science Foundation has already spent about $10,000,000 in an effort to bring science text books up to date. "The problem," one scientist explained, "was not merely that there was much more science but that it was different!"

Who then can finish a course in such a wide-open, unlimited world? Education that is not continuous can sometimes be more dangerous than no education at all.

A man who knows that he does not know may someday know. A college graduate who thinks he knows — because he once knew — can remain victimized by his old prejudices and incomplete ideas which he mistakenly identifies with education.

Hospital Week Coming

Health Minister Ralph Lofmark has urged all B.C. residents to take a special interest in hospital affairs during Hospital Week, which is being observed May 11 to 17.

Those who visit local hospitals during open house or attend any of the numerous functions planned by hospital auxiliaries will be saying "thank you" to those whose daily task includes care of the sick and injured, the minister said Wednesday.

Psychotic Effects of Transplants

Some Follow Heart's Desire

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Some people receiving new hearts have paid by losing their minds.

They become psychotic, or mentally ill after heart transplant surgery. Others have developed curious psychological reactions.

This new aspect to the borrowing of human hearts was described to a convention of the American Psychiatric Association by Dr. Donald T. Lund, a psychiatric consultant to the heart transplant team at Stanford University Medical Centre. He said five of 13 persons receiving hearts at Stanford became psychotic soon after surgery. Three have died, including one who was mentally disturbed from the day of the operation.

Three other persons exhibited at least temporary emotional upsets, Dr. Lund said. One suffered from depression, the others from disturbances in mood and thinking.

In addition, a man who received a woman's heart wondered whether he would lose his masculinity. But he comforted himself with the thought that women are less likely to develop coronary heart disease.

A man in his 40s who received the heart of a 20-year-old felt that he now was young, born again.

A man who learned he had been given the heart of a prominent citizen confided that he felt an obligation to live up to standards set by the donor. Dr. Lund said Stanford established a policy of keeping secret the identities of donors so that recipients would not learn them from press reports.

The people who became seriously psychotic suffered from paranoia and delusions, Dr. Lund said.

One man suspected that the drug used to suppress the body's rejection mechanism against borrowed organs was a poison.

He thought the nurses and doctors wore masks to hide contemptuous, mocking expressions.

One reason for psychological reactions in heart recipients is that they know the rejection mechanism may set in and become lethal, Dr. Lund said.

For reasons still unknown, the heart-lung machine used in heart transplants may also be involved.

Temporary psychotic episodes have been noted in many patients who have been hooked up to such machines briefly during open-heart surgery.

Prednisone, one of the drugs used to counter the rejection mechanism, is also known to affect some people mentally.

Waiting anxiously for a long time for a donor to become available may also be a factor.

Red Cross Plane Crashes

COTONOU, Dahomey (Reuters) — A Red Cross relief plane crashed as it was about to land at Uli in Biafra killing all four crew members, the Red Cross announced Wednesday.

A Red Cross spokesman said a team of Swiss federal officials will fly to Uli to investigate the cause of the accident to the plane, a DC-6A. Its loss will reduce the capacity of the airlift from here to Uli by some 30 tons a night.

At a news conference, another pilot on the airlift who landed five minutes after the crash, said he heard the DC-6 receive orders to land. The airstrip was lighted and as the plane began its landing manoeuvre it exploded and crashed, he said.

The dead pilot, Carl Ericsson of Sweden, had made more than 120 relief flights between Cotonou and Biafra. Two of the other crew members were Swedes and the fourth was a West German.

The crash leaves the International Committee of the Red Cross with five other planes based in Cotonou, which between them made 11 successful landings at Uli airstrip Tuesday night.

Fish, Plant Life Die

Company Faces Ultimatum

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davies said Wednesday night that divers, investigating the bottom of Long Harbor, Nfld., where a phosphate plant is located, found all fish life and plant life dead.

He said in an interview that officials of the Electric Reduction Company, which operates the plant, now are installing centrifuges which they hope will prevent damaging waste from going into the harbor, and on into Placentia Bay. Tests will be made in a matter of days.

If these centrifuges are not satisfactory, said Davies, it could mean the plant, employing some 400 workers, could be shut down for six months or more while an effective anti-pollution system is developed.

Earlier, Davies announced that a large part of Placentia Bay had been closed to commercial fishermen when it was found that herring had been turning red and dying in the area. The company agreed to close the plant immediately.

Davies said that his department had been watching the situation since January, and the problem appeared to be subsiding until it recently "flared up again."

Although fish were affected in parts of Placentia Bay, the minister said there was no evidence of lobster being affected. And he said the health department has been investigating the situation and has found no indication that humans are "in any way whatsoever being affected."

Blood Flows

Students Battle, Troopers Ram

From AP — Negro students fought with white students Wednesday at the gates of the City College of New York, and state troopers from New Hampshire and Vermont broke down doors at Dartmouth College to eject student demonstrators.

Their heads and faces streaming blood, seven white students were taken to hospital after the battle at the CCNY gates.

CCNY President Buell G. Gallagher ordered the 20,000-student school closed for the second time in three weeks.

A spokesman said later CCNY will reopen today with "adequate police protection on campus."

Earlier Wednesday, state police, helmeted but without clubs, dragged and carried out some of 60 Dartmouth anti-war students sitting in to protest the Reserve Officers Training Corps on campus. Other officers of the administration building in Hanover, N.H., peacefully.

Helmeted New York City policemen were stationed at the east gate to the CCNY South Campus, which Negro and Puerto Rican students blockaded from April 22 to last Monday.

MAJOR VIOLENCE

CCNY reopened on Tuesday amid scattered disorder and tension, which built up to the major violence Wednesday.

The Negroes and Puerto Ricans had barricaded the campus in demanding a separate school of black and Hispanic studies and a freshmen enrolment in proportion to the Negro and Puerto Rican enrolment in the city high schools, which is about 40 per cent.

SOME STUDENTS

The board of higher education, which governs the 165,000-student City University, of which CCNY is a part, has authorized negotiators to meet with representatives of the dissent students.

As campus disorders in the United States escalated, three congressmen urged a withdrawal of federal funds from colleges that fail to put down student uprisings. But other congressmen doubted that a cutoff would solve the problem.

Kitimat To Get Housing

KITIMAT (CP) — Eurocan Pulp and Paper Co. said Wednesday about $10,000,000 worth of housing will be built here and at nearby Burns Lake for employees of its Kitimat mill.

Plans call for construction of 427 units in Kitimat and 30 in Burns Lake in the next 12 months. Eurocan's $100,000,000-plus mill is under construction at Kitimat, 400 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Today's Problems Go Before Panel

A youth panel will discuss the problems of today at the Family and Children's Service's annual general meeting Wednesday.

Dust Problem Stops Trains

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — City council has decided no coal trains will be allowed into Neptune Terminals' bulk-loading area here until adequate dust control is assured. Council approved $3,000 to hire consultants to conduct a pollution survey.

The six-member panel will be representative of students at different levels, as well as others chosen because of home environment, economics or race.

Persons interested may telephone or write questions to the Intake Section, Family and Children's Service, 1627 Fort Street, or ask them at the meeting.

The panel discussion will be preceded by a brief report and election of officers.

The meeting will be open to the public and will be held at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium of the provincial museum.

Navy Removes Bombs Found in Tidal Pool

Two eight-year-old practice bombs that were discovered by waders in a tidal pool off Coburg Peninsula in Esquimalt Lagoon Tuesday have been removed by a team from the Naval Diving Clearance Establishment.

The 40-inch squid bombs, which could not have exploded, were dug from the sand by the crew headed by Lieut. Tom Gardner, and hauled ashore. They were identified later as Mark 4 mortar bombs.

More Funds Urged For Peace Projects

NARAMATA (Special) — The B.C. conference of the United Church of Canada Wednesday called for a cut in NATO and NORAD expenditures so that at least 1 per cent of the gross national product could be used to assist developing nations.

Almost 500 delegates attending the 45th annual meeting of the conference, voted to send a petition to the federal government with their recommendation.

The conference went on record that the members would be gratified if the pattern could be reversed, so that 1 per cent only would be spent for defence and 3 per cent for peace, by assisting underprivileged countries toward a more equitable status in the family of nations.

Under consideration by the conference in the report of the commission on the ministry in the 20th century, which attempts to define the ministry in today's world in clearer terms. The report is an attempt to put the standards of the professional ministry more in line with the standards of other professions, and will involve some changes in the concept of the role and function of the ministry.

One of the questions asked was

B.C. Juvenile Admits Arson

SURREY (CP) — A Surrey juvenile was put on indefinite probation when he pleaded guilty in magistrate's court to three arson charges. A second juvenile was remanded to May 13 for a date to be set for trial on three related charges. The charges were laid following a series of fires in homes and vacant houses in this Vancouver suburb.

whether these changes (not specified) would adversely affect unity negotiations with the Anglican Church.

Dr. Bruce McLeod of Westdale United Church, Hamilton, Ont., who is theme speaker, said, "This will not upset negotiations with Anglicans. If these two churches are going to come together, it will be as two percolating lively bodies, each of them changing, not as two static things. If they don't change, they'll never get together."

This was followed by comment by Rev. Rodney Booth of Vancouver, public relations co-ordinator for the church, who said, "two dead horses can't pull a cart."

The conference today will discuss union with the Anglican Church.

A new feature of the meeting is the use of audio-visual aids. Movies and slides are flashed on a screen during presentations. Tape recordings are also being used extensively.

Well Known in Military Circles

Real-Estate Leader Dies

Lt.-Col. Frances Brooke Jervis Stephenson, a man well known in Victoria real-estate and military circles, died Tuesday in Mount St. Mary Hospital where he had been for several years.

Born in Partham, Ont., on March 19, 1881, Mr. Stephenson saw active service overseas with the 29th Vancouver Battalion and the Royal Engineers.

After the war he began his business career with the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in the B.C. Interior, later shifting to R.S. Day and Sons in Victoria.

In 1930, he joined R. H. B. Ker and Col. B. R. Ker in founding the real estate firm, Ker and Stephenson Ltd.

Between 1930 and 1934 he was battalion commander with the

First Battalion, the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment.

Mr. Stephenson resumed command of the battalion which remained in reserve in Victoria for the Second World War and held the position from 1940 to 1946.

In addition to his post as managing director of Ker and Stephenson Ltd., he was a director of the Pacific Coast Fire Insurance Co. and president of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

He is survived by his widow, the former Edna L. Mitchell, and a son, Brooke Jr., both of Victoria, and two brothers, Jervis of Toronto and Carlton of Lynchburg, Va.

A private funeral service will be held. Burial arrangements have not been completed.

Parties Contest Will Verdict

An appeal was filed in Supreme Court here Tuesday by John Douglas Ford against the decision of Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton in the case of millionaire Allan Douglas Ford's 1958 will.

Another of the beneficiaries, Christ Church Cathedral, has also appealed the ruling that Allan Ford was capable of making a will in 1958.

Both parties want to see a will dated June 8, 1933, upheld.

Under it, the cathedral and John Ford would both get larger amounts of the $1,153,792 estate.

LOCAL CHARITIES

Under the terms of that will, John Ford would have got most of the estate, but under the 1958 will upheld by Mr. Justice Wootton he gets $50,000 and the balance goes to local charities.

Both appellants maintain the millionaire was not of sound mind when he made the second will, and that his memory and understanding were impaired.

It is also alleged that Allan Ford was suffering from the delusion that John Ford was not his son.

IN JANUARY

John Ford flew here for the eight-day hearing in January. Both parties claim the decision of Mr. Justice Wootton was wrong in law and against the weight of evidence.

They also maintain that the court erred in holding that Mr. Ford was of competent mind and understanding when he wrote the 1958 will, and that not enough weight was attached to the evidence of witnesses who told of Mr. Ford's eccentricities.

RICH MAN

At the January hearing, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mackay told of a trip they made to East Sooke with the rich man in 1959. He told them he was commemorating picnics he had with Sir Winston Churchill and the Viceroy of India in the 1890s. Witnesses said he wore old-fashioned motoring clothes.

Mr. Ford appeared for the trip in a cap, goggles and gauntlets and a long scarf that hung well below his hips.

AT TRIAL

At the trial, Mr. Justice Wootton ruled the evidence showed Mr. Ford was "a dramatist and an elderly person of some conceit who liked to impress his audience" but added, "All this in my view is an indication of old age and forgetfulness, but not necessarily incompetence. So many old persons like to command and hold the stage and they adopt many expedients to that end."

No date has been set for the hearing of the appeal.

Vancouver

Welfare Study Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government plans a $29,000 computer study of welfare needs and services in the greater Vancouver area. Grace McCarthy, minister without portfolio, announced.

The report on the cost-benefits study will be due Jan. 3, 1970, she told 200 social welfare workers and municipal representatives at a meeting here.

She said the program could result in a revolutionary change in social welfare in Canada.

DUPLICATIONS, GAPS

"I am concerned about the apparent competition among agencies, the apparent duplication of services and the gaps in the service," she said.

She said welfare services now were good for yesterday and cope as best they can with the needs of today. But they could be "overwhelmed tomorrow."

"Unless we can get and define tangible results we should examine closely the agency's programs and our fiscal participation."

German Weekly Will Disclose Soon:

Israel Full-Fledged Nuclear Power

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Israel has completed five 20-kiloton atomic bombs without test explosions and has become the world's sixth nuclear power.

In a story by Peter Lust, special German affairs correspondent, the newspaper says the bombs were completed at Israel's nuclear test station in the Negev Desert.

The story says the existence of the bombs — a sixth is, almost finished — was discovered by a group of journalists of the German weekly Der Spiegel (The Mirror).

Der Spiegel's story is to be published later this week, it says.

***
The newspaper says the bombs were completed in early February at the test station 11 miles from the pioneer settlement of Dimona, halfway between Beersheba

and the southern tip of the Dead Sea.

It says that as soon as the bombs were completed, they were rushed to a destination whose location is Israel's best-guarded military secret.

It says Israel could deliver the bombs with its A-4 Skyhawk jets, part of its operational air force. Later, F-4 Phantoms could be earmarked for that purpose, although the Phantoms are not operating yet.

The bombs are similar in type to those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the newspaper says.

***
It says the existence of the nuclear test station near Dimona was "reportedly" discovered nine years ago by a U.S. U-2 observation aircraft. Security is so strict, the newspaper says, that an Israeli jet accidentally straying over Dimona after being hit by Egyptians on June 6, 1967, was shot down by Israeli rockets.

The pilot was reportedly killed. Apparently, the test station contains a reactor capable of producing both nuclear and thermonuclear bombs, the newspaper says.

It says the station appar-

Port Said Hit, Lebanese Battle Arabs

Israeli artillery shelled Port Said Wednesday for the first time since the 1967 war, and an Egyptian military spokesman said a spotter plane directing the bombardment was shot down. In addition to battling daylong across the Suez Canal, Arab and Israeli forces also fought across the Jordan River ceasefire line.

Lebanese army troops opened a major offensive inside their borders Wednesday against Syrian-backed Arab guerrilla forces who have defied an ultimatum from the high command in Beirut to get out of the sensitive border area with Israel.

Israeli military spokesmen said their jet planes attacked an Arab commando base inside Jordan and their ground forces exchanged artillery and small arms fire with Egyptian and Jordanian troops across the eastern and western fronts.

Outlook Bleak

Air Canada, Union Try to Fix Agenda

● Air Canada employees feeling the pinch.

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and airline negotiators, meeting Wednesday for the first time in more than a week, adjourned until today their talks aimed at settling the Air Canada strike now in its third week.

The talks, which have moved from Montreal to Ottawa and back to Montreal since the strike began April 20, are to resume at about 10:30 a.m. at a downtown hotel.

Five members from the Air Canada negotiating team and five from the International Association of Machinists formed a subcommittee Wednesday to discuss procedure and an agenda for the talks.

The subcommittee met for about two hours shortly after both sides returned from a supper break Wednesday night. It also met earlier in the afternoon for about 45 minutes. Mike Rygas, Canadian vice-president of the machinists union, said the decision to form the subcommittee was taken in the absence of a mediating party in hopes of finding new

Smoking Health Hazard

CBC Radio, TV Dousing All Tobacco Advertising

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced Wednesday all tobacco advertising will be halted on both its radio and television networks because of the smoking health hazard.

Directors of the publicly-owned corporation agreed on the move at an Ottawa meeting last week.

A CBC statement quoted president George Davidson as saying there "are increasing indications of public awareness of the smoking problem as a result of the diversity of representations made before the Parliamentary committee on health. Trends of public opinion regarding the health considerations related to smoking indicate a growing international concern."

AFTER 5 P.M.

To date, the CBC has scheduled tobacco advertising, after 9 p.m. to avoid influencing younger viewers. It also has made it a practice of accepting only tobacco commercials that stress brand preference rather than those that emphasize smoking as a pleasurable experience.

CBC tobacco advertising revenue amounts to about $700,000 annually. However, since most tobacco advertising has been carried in the prime 9 to 11 p.m. period, other sponsors will be found to fill the gap, the CBC said.

The decision means the CBC will not accept any new tobacco

Buyers Rush For Marks

BONN (CP-Reuters) — A scramble by speculators to buy West German marks Wednesday in anticipation of a possible upward revaluation approached the proportions of an international monetary crisis which hit world money markets in November.

But a West German government spokesman confirmed that a decision on mark revaluation has not yet been made.

After a day of hectic trading on the Frankfurt market, during which the federal bank was believed to have bought $300,000,000 U.S., the bank took steps to control the flow of money in and out of the country.

Authorities suspended arrangements under which private West German banks borrow United States dollars from the central bank.

Apparently this was designed to stop the possibility of private banks using the dollars for out-of-country transactions. The dollars then could flow back easily into West Germany to heighten the speculative crisis.

NO SWAPS

In technical terms, the federal bank announced it had suspended forward U.S. dollar swap transactions with commercial banks for capital export.

Forward buying is a method of taking an option on a certain currency at the current price for delivery at a future date.

In Frankfurt, the dollar exchange rate closed Wednesday at a buying price of 3.9675 marks, below its official floor price of 3.9700.

June Vote Predicted By McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — On May 15, Premier Bennett will announce a general provincial election for June 23, B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer said Wednesday.

"Bennett's following his usual pattern," McGeer said in an interview. "He drops broad election hints, then denies it and tries to throw everybody off the track while he prepares himself for it himself — and then, surprise! he calls an election."

Anniversary Mass

Spirit of Hitler Heiled in Spain

MADRID (UPI) — About 200 Falangists and Nazi sympathizers Wednesday attended a Roman Catholic mass for the soul of Adolf Hitler.

Some of the people at the mass wore swastika armbands, and there were several shouts of "heil Hitler."

The mass was held to mark the 24th anniversary of Hitler's death.

After the service, the crowd which included many ex-combatants of the Spanish Blue Division which fought alongside Nazi troops against the Soviet Union, sang the Falangist anthem with their hands raised in the Nazi salute.

Police were present but did not intervene. They briefly detained British TV cameraman Michael Gore on the complaint of a middle-aged man, apparently a German, who said his picture had been taken without permission. A senior police officer said Gore had committed no offence and released him.

House Debate Unlikely On Safeguard Control

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday that if the government ever agreed to bringing the proposed United States Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system under the control of the North American Air Defence Command, the move would not necessarily be discussed by Parliament.

T. C. Douglas, the NDP leader, sought assurance that Canada would not agree to such a move without first consulting Parliament.

UP TO GOVERNMENT

He based his question on a comment by Lt.-Gen. F. R. Sharp, NORAD's deputy commander and a Canadian, who told a Commons committee Tuesday that from a military point of view the ABM system should be under NORAD control.

Trudeau said that Sharp "obviously implied that the matter was for a political decision." It was the intention of the government to take political responsibility, and he said the question might not be discussed in Parliament beforehand.

He said the matter now is before the Commons defence committee and MPs are free to express their opinions there "and we hope they will."

Referring to another question in the defence committee Tuesday while Gen. Sharp was appearing, Harold Winch (NDP-Vancouver East) asked whether Canada plans to extend its NORAD base at North Bay, Ont., so it could be used as an alternative headquarters to Colorado Springs, Colo.

Douglas asked whether there are any plans to remove the Bomarc missiles from North Bay. Cudieux said there are no plans to remove them before the mid-1970s.

Defence Minister Leo Cudieux said no extension would be required for this. It would be necessary only for the Canadian government to accept the proposition and formalize it.

Washington (UPI) — The Pentagon announced Wednesday a tentative plan to ship to the east coast large amounts of chemical agents — including deadly nerve gas — for disposal in the Atlantic Ocean. One member of Congress called for an investigation to determine if the plan endangered human and marine life.

A spokesman said the operation, to cost $2,900,000, would involve shipping 27,000 tons of the material via rail to New Jersey, where it would be loaded aboard four surplus Second World War Liberty ships which would subsequently be towed to sea and sunk 250 miles from shore.

The defence department released details of the plan, which it said was tentative, after Rep. Richard McCarthy, D-N.Y., disclosed it to newsmen.

He released letters written to Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and Transportation Secretary John Volpe questioning whether the rail shipments will endanger human lives and whether dumping the poisonous substances in the ocean would damage marine life.

A report from Elizabeth, N.J., said the plan would send tank cars full of the deadly gas through four New Jersey towns on elevated tracks.

The possibility of a leakage is "too grisly to think about," said Elizabeth city council president Michael McGuire, who expected to be on the line to New Jersey's congressional delegation "first thing in the morning."

The train also would pass through neighboring Rahway, Linden and Perth Amboy, a corridor which along with Elizabeth has 210,000 persons. McCarthy called for a study of alternative means of getting rid of the Second World War chemical agents, but thinks a revaluation of the mark is not necessary at the moment. The speculative rush in Frankfurt on Wednesday, which was not reflected on all other markets, was still well below the worst of the November crisis when the franc came under tremendous pressure.

In the first week of November some $750,000,000 worth of "hot money" flowed into West Germany in the hope of an upward revaluation of the mark. This swelled to $1,300,000,000 in the second week with a fantastic $350,000,000 on the peak day of Nov. 15.

Since the latest run on the mark started 10 days ago with the resignation of Charles de Gaulle as president of France, the West German federal bank has bought an estimated $1,000,000,000, financial sources in Frankfurt said.

SWISS NERVOUS

In Zurich, Switzerland, dealers described the foreign exchange market as nervous and hectic with a heavy demand for marks dominating trading.

After pushing through its dollar ceiling early in trading on the Swiss market, the mark remained strong throughout dealings, to close at 3.9670-80 compared with a final rate of 3.9700-10 Tuesday night.

Swiss dealers said there was concern at the disparity between the actual rate and the official ceiling, but the approach of this weekend's monthly central bankers' meeting at the Bank for International Settlements in Basel was not a market factor, they believed.

methods of negotiating in order to streamline the talks.

Mike Pitchford, chief union negotiator, said that any agreement arrived at with Air Canada would be used as a bargaining point in talks with Canadian Pacific Airlines with which the union also has a labor dispute.

Earlier Wednesday, the seven Air Canada representatives and the 15 union representatives met in a 15-minute session.

Ryges said at the time that it was decided to adjourn to permit both sides time "to consider procedures" decide what items should be dealt with first.

The strike has grounded the airline's 108-plane fleet since April 20.

In Ottawa both sides were warned by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey Wednesday they can look forward to a long strike if negotiations do not work out.

Spiralling Costs Hit

Welfare Takers
'Just Laughing'

NORTH COWICHAN — Great concern over spiralling welfare costs were expressed at Wednesday's council meeting by Ald. Gerry Smith.

New welfare costs to the municipality increased from $37,000 in 1968 to $44,000 in 1967 and $95,000 in 1968, reaching a record level of $126,000 in this year's budget.

The alderman said, "Welfare costs get bigger and bigger, and they (recipients) are just laughing. I don't think welfare was intended for this purpose. He quoted examples of young people who claim they cannot get a job, stay with their parents and go on welfare.

"It is true, it is happening every day," he said. "If we are not going to do anything about the welfare costs they will keep on rising."

Mayor Donald Morton agreed but he asked, "How do you stop it?"

Ald. Tom Burge suggested examining every individual case and if necessary, referring it to the local welfare branch for investigation. Ald. Dennis Hogan noted the welfare problem exists all over the country and is not unique to this area.

With Ald. John Cannon, dissenting, council approved the first three readings of the five-year capital budget which projects capital expenditures until 1973. The various totals for the different years are: 1969, $742,382; 1970, $1,002,000; 1971, $1,460,000; 1972, $1,350,000; and $734,500 for 1973.

Ald. Cannon commented, "I think it is much like a cake mix, designed for good looks but not for good eating." Mayor Morton said the capital budget is open for revision and will be updated each year.

The majority of council members agreed the projection of costs is nothing but good housekeeping which will help municipalities and the provincial government in their planning efforts.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, council decided to write a letter to the agent of the Norwegian freighter Ariel advising him that a claim will be submitted with expenses incurred in the cleaning up of the beach at Chemainus after the ship accidentally discharged bunker oil.

Taking up the cause of boat owners, the Chemainus Rod and Gun club asked council for support. Ald. Margaret Robertson said, "We should give every help we possibly can and make sure it will not happen again."

LEASE CHANGE

Council will take first steps to change the lease for a piece of land from the Duncan Teen Town to the Duncan and district association for retarded children which plans to build a sheltered workshop, adjacent to the Cowichan exhibition grounds.

In a letter to council the mayor of Duncan Teen Town Ron Arnold stated, "We felt that we would not be able to reach the goal we had set in mind years ago of a Teen Town hall in our lifetime and that the retarded children's association could use the land right away."

Desks Given
To Campers

NANAIMO — Lake Cowichan school district has donated 36 surplus school desks to the Vancouver Island camp school for special children.

The desks will be delivered to the Lake Cowichan Kiwanis camp for handicapped children. The school will be held this year from June 15 to July 5.

PORT ALBERNI — Residents of Port Alberni will be out in force tonight in a money-raising blitz for the Trail disaster fund.

Starting about 6:30 p.m. a small army of canvassers will be ringing doorbells throughout the area for donations.

Chairman of the drive is Mayor Fred Bishop and canvass chairman is Irving Wilson.

Meanwhile, newly-elected MP for Comox-Alberni Tom Barnett said the federal government should set up a national disaster fund, "because at the present, there is no real yardstick by which the federal government takes a hand." He suggested a small amount could be set aside out of the general fund each year to build up the disaster fund.

Qualicum Beach

Line-Holding Drops Taxes

QUALICUM BEACH — An unexpected drop in taxes for some Qualicum residents was forecast at the regular meeting of council held here Monday.

A hold-the-line budget for general expenditure together with a slight reduction in the school rate for district 69, has brought the overall mill rate down from 52.64 in 1968 to 52.46 in 1969.

However, for those with recently increased assessments, taxes will still be going up.

In other business, a request from 13-year-old Bruce Chamberlayne for a licence to operate an ice cream cart on a limited area of the beach during the summer caused considerable interest.

Council was in favor of granting the request but it was decided to discuss the matter further with Bruce before reaching a decision.

WATER SUPPLY

Council discussed the possibility of supplying water to a new development at French Creek where M. G. Zorkin Co. Ltd. of Nanaimo is hoping to build a 250-room hotel.

The question of the use of the per capita grant increase was discussed when Anton Krut, a director of the district 69 ambulance society, attended the meeting to ask whether council intended making a contribution to the society.

Referring to current controversies between Premier Bennett and the mayor of Vancouver, Mayor C. Danks suggested a decision be postponed until the next meeting by which time the matter might have been clarified.

Sponsor of Student Paper Ousted

Teacher Balks at Censoring Role

PORT ALBERNI — Hilda Kellington, a 24-year-old teacher of English, said Wednesday night she had been removed as sponsor of a local high school paper, The Phoenix.

She said she was taken off the job because she refused to censor the publication.

Mike Rutman, a 17-year-old grade 12 student and a co-editor of The Phoenix, said earlier that the school principal, Norman Burgess, last week recalled 1,000 copies of the Alberni district secondary school paper and ordered the front page destroyed because of what he termed obscene and possibly libelous material.

Mr. Burgess was not available for comment but vice-principal Bill Marshall confirmed that the students were told one story was possibly dangerous and another did not belong in the paper.

Rutman said the principal had allowed publication of a second edition Tuesday after offensive words were deleted from an article about the Chinese cultural revolution and a front-page story implying Alberni students were drinking heavily.

He said the principal had demanded removal of Mrs. Kellington for alleged irresponsibility in allowing the students to publish the material.

Rutman said the students were told they could continue to publish the school paper provided Mrs. Kellington was removed, the number of pages was reduced, the paper's radical content was softened and provided the paper stressed the positive, not the negative, aspects of the school.

Earlier this year, The Phoenix was awarded a shield by the University of B.C.'s student newspaper for being the best high school paper in B.C.

Mr. Marshall said it was the usual practice for the principal to approve each edition of the paper before it was put out for distribution. The paper is published four times a year.

He said, "No principal likes to be a censor. However, Mr. Burgess felt the editors had mistaken freedom for licence and had taken people's names and job futures into their own hands, which no one has a right to do."

Yellow Point players rush festival set into place for performance

One-Acters Draw Crowd

Photostory by ARNOLD OLSON

PARKSVILLE — The Vancouver Island one-act drama festival had one of the best attendances in many years Tuesday with 100 people seated in the Parksville community hall for opening performances.

Child actors and actresses served to break the ice, when Jasmine Tanikow, Fern George and Don Brimacombe, as the young troupe, performed Epimanchos.

Adjudicator, Mrs. Dorothy Darcy Goldrick said the three "Put us in a very good mood."

"The boy was very good — I expect he will show us some very good adult drama when he gets a little older," she said.

Portrayal 'Didn't Drop'

Pat Boulanger's portrayal of the mother, Maria, "didn't drop once," Mrs. Goldrick said.

Chris Vardy as Jim could have given more volume at the beginning to set the play off on a stronger beat and Jan Metcalfe as Eric should remember that he would not project as well when turning his face downward, she said.

Yellow Point drama group's production of the Macabre fairy tale Little Brother, Little Sister, by David Campbell was immediately complemented because the set design depicting an underground nuclear bomb shelter was representative as was the play.

Susan Donald, as Madam, was commended for projecting the sudden awakening to adolescence from being a child.

Danny Carmichael as Sir, has good movements and timing but was told that he should remember that when speaking upstage, he should give more volume.

Director Mrs. Margaret Davidson was told that in blocking an actor to face upstage which was "sometimes very imaginative" she should give emphasis to voice levels because Sir's voice was "not quite strong enough."

Ken Gogo, as a gargantuan cook, was complemented, but told that occasionally he should remember to build to a climax rather than give all he had continually. The three actors were told they had illustrated well the technique of "acting from within."

Wednesday night's productions included Jack Hodgins' original play The Kingfisher, produced by Yellow Point drama group and directed by Audrey Seifried; Girls Must Talk by Paul Gantt, produced by Victoria's Country Church Players under the direction of Sybil Parker, and the same club's production of the Beepken Overcoat by Wolf Markowitz directed by W. H. Parker.

Tonight's theatre will include Harewood players' production of The Box, Box, Box by Elizabeth Wilson, with the playwright directing her own play.

Courtenay Little Theatre will produce The Dirty Old Man by John Carline, directed by Graham Woodward and the evening will close with Duncan Drama Club's The Party, by Derek Benfield, directed by Johanna Dude Leeuw.

Parks

Status Given Guards

CAMPBELL RIVER — Council will undertake to dedicate officially all developed parks in its jurisdiction immediately, and place all possible undeveloped sites on reserve.

The action was decided after municipal solicitor Anthony Sarich pointed out that parks held in trust are overprotected because the land cannot be legally developed into playgrounds, ball diamonds, swimming pools or other recreational use that does not fit the exact definition of a park.

He recommended that these parks be dedicated instead. He said a vote of property owners is needed to remove the dedication.

Mr. Sarich said lands held in reserve for parks are not completely protected as they can be taken off the reserve list by a two-thirds vote of council and assigned to other uses.

Great Day
For Beaches

Those that could went to the beaches Wednesday as bright sun helped send temperatures around the island to record levels.

In Nanaimo, the mercury soared to 75, highest ever for May 7 and in Tofino, the record was 72.

Unofficially, in the Alberni valley, it was 75. Victoria recorded a twenty-year record high with a top temperature of 75.

Health Unit

Seminar
Topic
Drugs

NANAIMO — The central Vancouver Island health unit will co-operate with the narcotics foundation to present a two-day seminar on drug misuse May 28 to 29.

Dr. Sven Jensen's report to the health unit several months ago stressed the need for public education.

The seminar will be on an invitation basis for both school personnel and other agencies concerned with education and welfare of young people.

Junior Chamber of Commerce president-elect Ron Biggs said he would ask the health unit to include one of his club's members on the invitation list or to arrange if possible, for one of those attending to be a speaker at a Jaycee-sponsored public forum.

SPCA Decides On Fund Use

DUNCAN — The Cowichan branch of the SPCA has decided to use a fund set up in memory of the late Bill Evans of Salt Spring Island to help defray the costs of spaying female dogs adopted from the Duncan SPCA shelter. Mr. Evans was a well-known Border collie breeder and sheep dog trial competitor.

Campbell River Recruiting

Bilingual Teachers Wanted

CAMPBELL RIVER — An attempt to recruit French-language bilingual teachers to teach French in Campbell River schools will be carried out by the local school board.

The program was approved at this week's meeting of the board after trustee Al Rollins pointed out bilingual teachers could impart to children not only the French language, but some appreciation of French Canadian culture.

Senior secondary school principal John Young told the board, "French is not sufficiently taught in elementary school and not well enough taught in secondary schools. Any efforts to improve this situation I personally recommend."

In other business, the board decided to inaugurate a film exchange with the Courtenay board so that the scope of both libraries could be increased.

The board debated whether or not to accept two Chinese students from Sarawak on condition they fulfill immigration requirements.

It was pointed out, however, that attaching this kind of condition might impinge on a decision by the immigration authorities, so a motion by John Ross was passed that the students be advised they will be accepted as students on their arrival at Campbell River.

Among tenders opened by the board for the new gymnasium complex at the senior secondary school was one from Southern Construction Company of Port Alberni for $54,207 under the estimated cost without a stage and $177 under with the stage.

The company in its bid undertakes to complete the building within 150 days of approval of the tender.

Wayne Drinnan, Michelle Caskey rehearse scene

Rehearsals Stepped Up For Tender Trap Opening

NANAIMO — Nanaimo Theatre Group will stage The Tender Trap May 15, 16 and 17.

The stage play is perhaps better remembered for the screen adaption as a musical with Frank Sinatra and Debbie Reynolds as the leads. Playing these two parts will be Wayne Drinnan and Charlie Reader with Michelle Caskey as Julie Gillis.

The production went into rehearsal shortly after the group's financially and artistically successful production of My Fair Lady.

Since March the group, under the direction of Robert Cooke has been rehearsing about three evenings a week in Behan House.

However, with less than two weeks to go rehearsals will be increased.

While rehearsals continue, stage props and scenery are being built under production manager Cliff Coulish and stage manager Gordon Kirby.

Mr. Cooke said, "We really don't expect to make this production compare with My Fair Lady. It can't be because this is a comedy, while My Fair Lady was a musical; that would be comparing oranges and apples. But in its own category, we hope to make an enjoyable production."

"We should be able to concentrate more on the acting, for instance, because we won't have to worry about singing or dancing."

Growth Aim

Liberals Name Officers In Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Nanaimo Liberal Association directors elected Bob Plecas as president Monday.

Accepting office, Mr. Plecas said he was pleased to see the party growing in strength and credited past president, Mladen Zorkin with having built the party to the point where there was a strong foundation on which this year's executive could build.

***

"I would like to see the people join the party but more important, I want to see the party go to the people," he said.

He also referred to the need to make the party attractive to more people.

Other officers elected were: Ron Biggs and Joe Boulding as first and second vice-presidents; Joan Darwin, secretary, and Stuart Wright, treasurer.

The party will hold a nomination convention June 28 to choose a provincial election candidate.

Merger Area Under Study

NANAIMO — Three University of British Columbia planning department graduate students will study Nanaimo area this summer and report their conclusions to the regional district board.

The three students will concentrate on facets of government that would be needed if the area's various improvement districts were to amalgamate.

Parents Told Grim Facts of Juvenile Life

Breakdown of Home Behind Sniffing

A four-year-old boy and his five-year-old sister are in Victoria's psychiatric wards as a result of sniffing gasoline.

A 13-year-old boy has become a "vegetable" with no hope of recovery as a result of 18 months of glue sniffing.

The three are among 14 youngsters in Victoria hospitals' psychiatric wards as a result of the sniffing habit, according to Victoria police Constable Gary Galbraith of the juvenile liaison squad.

He told parents at a meeting Tuesday of Cordova elementary school P.T.A. that one per cent of Victoria juveniles are glue sniffers.

The drug education program being put into the schools, he told them, was part of a calculated risk.

"There was a lot of discussion before we decided to put the program on," he said.

"One thing we were scared of — and are still scared of — is that we may be telling kids facts which give them ideas and get them started on a habit they didn't have."

He said that since starting the program he has had good results with young people telling him that they have stopped taking drugs or sniffing glue.

Constable Galbraith said in nearly every case of a child using drugs or sniffing it has been because of family breakdown.

"They come from houses which have ceased to be homes," he said, "from places they just go to sleep or eat, but their parents are too caught up with their own affairs to have a family core."

He said that according to post mortems performed elsewhere upon children who died as a result of sniffing there had been deterioration of livers, respiratory system, and blood organisms.

According to Constable Galbraith, 18 young people under the age of 18 died in Canada last year as a result of sniffing.

"Some people have said the products used should be taken off the market, but if they were, one-half of our working population would be unemployed."

"Think of the people who work in the car industry for a start — if you can gasoline you have to do without cars."

"If you do know of some child using drugs or sniffing," he said, "Don't turn your back on it. Call the school, or the police, or anyone in authority, but don't turn your back."

He said no juvenile has ever been jailed for taking drugs.

"Trafficking, yes, but using, no," he said.

Building Ban Reaction All Favorable

Mayor Archibald Galbraith of Central Saanich said Tuesday that the public had reacted favorably to the year-long construction ban imposed on the southwest section of the municipality last week.

"There has certainly been no criticism of the move," he said. "People there realize it is necessary."

He said the Capital Region Board was "working as hard as they can" in its study on the proposed $1,995,000 sewer system, and that it had just requested additional information.

Hospital Week Coming

Health Minister Ralph Lofmark has urged all B.C. residents to take a special interest in hospital affairs during Hospital Week, which is being observed May 11 to 17.

Those who visit local hospitals during open house or attend any of the numerous functions planned by hospital auxiliaries will be saying "thank you" to those whose daily task includes care of the sick and injured, the minister said Wednesday.

Fish, Plant Life Die

Company Faces Ultimatum

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davies said Wednesday night that divers, investigating the bottom of Long Harbor, Nfld., where a phosphate plant is located, found all fish life and plant life dead.

He said in an interview that officials of the Electric Reduction Company, which operates the plant, now are installing centrifuges which they hope will prevent damaging waste from going into the harbor, and on into Placentia Bay. Tests will be made in a matter of days.

If those centrifuges are not satisfactory, said Davies, it could mean the plant, employing some 400 workers, could be shut down for six months or more while an effective anti-pollution system is developed.

Psychotic Effects of Transplants

Some Follow Heart's Desire

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — heart transplant team at Stanford University Medical Centre. Some people receiving new hearts have paid by losing their minds.

They become psychotic or mentally ill after heart transplant surgery. Three have died, developed curious psychological disturbances from the day of the operation.

This new aspect to the borrowing of human hearts was at least temporarily described to a convention of the American Psychiatric Association by Dr. Donald T. Lund, a psychiatrist consultant to the mood and thinking.

In addition, a man who received a woman's heart wondered whether he would lose his masculinity. But he comforted himself with the thought that women are less likely to develop coronary heart disease.

A man in his 40s who received the heart of a 20-year-old felt that he now was young, born again.

A man who learned he had been given the heart of a prominent citizen confided that he felt an obligation to live up to standards set by the donor.

Dr. Lund said Stanford established a policy of keeping secret the identities of donors so that recipients would not learn them from press reports.

The people who became seriously psychotic suffered from paranoia and delusions, Dr. Lund said.

One man suspected that the drug used to suppress the body's rejection mechanism against borrowed organs was a poison.

He thought the nurses and doctors wore masks to hide contemptuous, mocking expressions.

One reason for psychological reactions in heart recipients is that they know the rejection mechanism may set in and become lethal, Dr. Lund said.

For reasons still unknown, the heart-lung machine used in heart transplants may also be involved.

Temporary psychotic episodes have been noted in many patients who have been hooked up to such machines briefly during open-heart surgery.

Prednisone, one of the drugs used to counter the rejection mechanism, is also known to affect some people mentally.

Waiting anxiously for a long time for a donor to become available may also be a factor.

Red Cross Plane Crashes

COTONOU, Dahomey (Reuters) — A Red Cross relief plane crashed as it was about to land at Uli in Biafra killing all four crew members, the Red Cross announced Wednesday.

A Red Cross spokesman said a team of Swiss federal officials will fly to Uli to investigate the cause of the accident to the plane, a DC-6A. Its loss will reduce the capacity of the airlift from here to Uli by some 30 tons a night.

At a news conference, another pilot on the airlift who landed five minutes after the crash, said he heard the DC-6A receive orders to land. The airstrip was lit and as the plane began its landing manoeuvre it exploded and crashed, he said.

The dead pilot, Carl Ericson of Sweden, had made more than 120 relief flights between Cotonou and Biafra. Two of the other crew members were Swedes and the fourth was a West German.

The crash leaves the International Committee of the Red Cross with five other planes based in Cotonou, which between them made 11 successful landings at Uli airstrip Tuesday night.

Blood Flows

Students Battle, Troopers Ram

From AP

Negro students fought with white students Wednesday at the gates of the City College of New York, and state troopers from New Hampshire and Vermont broke down doors at Dartmouth College to eject student demonstrators.

Their heads and faces streaming blood, seven white students were taken to hospital after the battle at the CCNY gates.

CCNY President Buell G. Gallagher ordered the 20,000-student school closed for the second time in three weeks.

A spokesman said later CCNY will reopen today with "adequate police protection on campus."

Earlier Wednesday, state police, helmeted but without clubs, dragged and carried out some of 50 Dartmouth anti-war students sitting in to protest the Reserve Officers Training Corps on campus. Others left the administration building in Hanover, N.H., peacefully.

Helmeted New York City policemen were stationed at the east gate to the CCNY South Campus, which Negro and Puerto Rican students blockaded from April 22 to last Monday.

MAJOR VIOLENCE

CCNY reopened on Tuesday amid scattered disorder and tension, which built up to the major violence Wednesday.

The Negroes and Puerto Ricans had barricaded the campus in demanding a separate school of black and Hispanic studies and a freshmen enrolment in proportion to the Negro and Puerto Rican enrolment in the city high schools, which is about 40 per cent.

SOME STUDENTS

The board of higher education, which governs the 165,000-student City University, of which CCNY is a part, has authorized negotiators to meet with representatives of the dissident students.

As campus disorders in the United States escalated, three congressmen urged a withdrawal of federal funds from colleges that fail to put down student uprisings. But other congressmen doubted that a cutoff would solve the problem.

Kitimat To Get Housing

KITIMAT (CP) — Eurocan Pulp and Paper Co. said Wednesday about $10,000,000 worth of housing will be built here and at nearby Burns Lake for employees of its Kitimat mill.

Plans call for construction of 437 units in Kitimat and 30 in Burns Lake in the next 15 months. Eurocan's $100,000,000-plus mill is under construction at Kitimat, 400 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Navy Removes Bombs Found in Tidal Pool

Two eight-year-old practice bombs that were discovered by waders in a tidal pool off Coburg Peninsula in Esquimalt Lagoon Tuesday have been removed by a team from the Naval Diving Clearance Establishment.

The 40-inch squid bombs, which could not have exploded, were dug from the sand by the crew headed by Lieut. Tom Gardner, and hauled ashore. They were identified later, as Mark 4 mortar bombs.

German Weekly Will Disclose Soon:

Israel Full-Fledged Nuclear Power

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Israel has completed five 20-kiloton atomic bombs without test explosions and has become the world's sixth nuclear power.

In a story by Peter Lust, special German affairs correspondent, the newspaper says the bombs were completed at Israel's nuclear test station in the Negev Desert.

The story says the existence of the bombs — a sixth is almost finished — was discovered by a group of journalists of the German weekly Der Spiegel (The Mirror).

Der Spiegel's story is to be published later this week, it says.

It says that as soon as the bombs were completed, they were rushed to a destination whose location is Israel's best-guarded military secret.

It says Israel could deliver the bombs with its A-4 Skyhawk jets, part of its operational air force. Later, F-4 Phantoms could be earmarked for that purpose, although the Phantoms are not operating yet.

The bombs are similar in type to those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the newspaper says.

It says the existence of the nuclear test station near Dimona was "reportedly" discovered nine years ago by a U.S. U-2 observation aircraft.

Security is so strict, the newspaper says, that an Israeli jet accidentally straying over Dimona after being hit by Egyptians on June 6, 1967, was shot down by Israeli rockets.

The pilot was reportedly killed.

Apparently, the test station contains a reactor capable of producing both nuclear and thermonuclear bombs, the newspaper says.

It says the station appears

Port Said Hit, Lebanese Battle Arabs

From UPI

Israeli artillery shelled Port Said Wednesday for the first time since the 1967 war, and an Egyptian military spokesman said a spotter plane directing the bombardment was shot down. In addition to battling daylong across the Suez Canal, Arab and Israeli forces also fought across the Jordan River ceasefire line.

Lebanese army troops opened a major offensive inside their borders Wednesday against Syrian-backed Arab guerrilla forces who have defied an ultimatum from the high command in Beirut to get out of the sensitive border area with Israel.

Israeli military spokesmen said their jet planes attacked an Arab commando base inside Jordan and their ground forces exchanged artillery and small arms fire with Egyptian and Jordanian troops across the eastern and western fronts.

Air Canada, Union Try to Fix Agenda

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and airline negotiators, meeting Wednesday for the first time in more than a week, adjourned until today their talks aimed at settling the Air Canada strike now in its third week.

The talks, which have moved from Montreal to Ottawa and back to Montreal since the strike began April 20, are to resume at about 10:30 a.m. at a downtown hotel.

Five members from the Air Canada negotiating team and five from the International Association of Machinists formed a subcommittee Wednesday to discuss procedure and an agenda for the talks.

The subcommittee met for about two hours shortly after both sides returned from a supper break Wednesday night. It also met earlier in the afternoon for about 45 minutes.

Mike Rygas, Canadian vice-president of the machinists union, said the decision to form the subcommittee was taken in the absence of a mediating party in hopes of finding new

Smoking Health Hazard

CBC Radio, TV Dousing All Tobacco Advertising

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced Wednesday all tobacco advertising will be halted on both its radio and television networks because of the smoking health hazard.

Directors of the publicly-owned corporation agreed on the move at an Ottawa meeting last week.

A CBC statement quoted president George Davidson as saying there "are increasing indications of public awareness of the smoking problem as well as by the diversity of representations made before the Parliamentary committee on health. Trends of public opinion regarding the health considerations related to smoking indicate a growing international concern."

AFTER 9 P.M.

To date, the CBC has scheduled tobacco advertising after 9 p.m. to avoid influencing younger viewers. It also has made it a practice of accepting only tobacco commercials that stress brand preference rather than those that emphasize smoking as a pleasurable experience.

CBC tobacco advertising revenue amounts to about $700,000 annually. However, since most tobacco advertising has been carried in the prime 9 to 11 p.m. period, other sponsors will be found to fill the gap, the CBC said.

The decision means the CBC will not accept any new tobacco

BUYERS RUSH MARKS

BONN (CP-Reuters) — A scramble by speculators to buy West German marks Wednesday in anticipation of a possible upward revaluation approached the proportions of an international monetary crisis which hit world money markets in November.

But a West German government spokesman confirmed that a decision on mark revaluation has not yet been made.

After a day of hectic trading on the Frankfurt market, during which the federal bank was believed to have bought $300,000,000 U.S., the bank took steps to control the flow of money in and out of the country.

Authorities suspended arrangements under which private West German banks borrow United States dollars from the central bank.

Apparently this was designed to stop the possibility of private banks using the dollars for out-of-country transactions. The dollars then could flow back easily into West Germany to heighten the speculative crisis.

NO SWAPS

In technical terms, the federal bank announced it had suspended forward U.S. dollar swap transactions with commercial banks for capital export.

Forward buying is a method of taking an option on a certain currency at the current price for delivery at a future date.

In Frankfurt, the dollar exchange rate closed Wednesday at a buying price of 3.5675 marks, below its official floor price of 3.5700.

Anniversary Mass

Spirit of Hitler Heiled in Spain

MADRID (UPI) — About 200 Falangists and Nazi sympathizers Wednesday attended a Roman Catholic mass for the soul of Adolf Hitler.

Some of the people at the mass wore swastika armbands, and there were several shouts of "heil Hitler."

The mass was held to mark the 24th anniversary of Hitler's death.

After the service, the crowd which included many ex-combatants of the Spanish Blue Division which fought alongside Nazi troops against the Soviet Union, sang the Falangist anthem with their hands raised in the Nazi salute.

Police were present but did not intervene. They briefly detained British TV cameraman Michael Gore on the complaint of a middle-aged man, apparently a German, who said his picture had been taken without permission. A senior police officer said Gore had committed no offence and released him.

Anti-Missile Action Could Skip House

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday that if the government ever agreed to bringing the proposed United States Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system under the control of the North American Air Defence Command, the move would not necessarily be discussed by Parliament.

T. C. Douglas, the NDP leader, sought assurance that Canada would not agree to such a move without first consulting Parliament.

UP TO GOVERNMENT

He based his question on a comment by Lt.-Gen. F. R. Sharp, NORAD's deputy commander and a Canadian, who told a Commons committee Tuesday that from a military point of view the AEM system should be under NORAD control.

Trudeau said that Sharp "obviously implied that the matter was for a political decision." It was the intention of the government to take political responsibility, and he said the question might not be discussed in Parliament beforehand.

He said the matter now is before the Commons defence committee and MPs are free to express their opinions there "and we hope they will."

Referring to another question in the defence committee Tuesday while Gen. Sharp was appearing, Harold Winch (NDP, Vancouver East) asked whether Canada plans to extend its NORAD base at North Bay, Ont., so it could be used as an alternative headquarters to Colorado Springs, Colo.

Douglas asked whether there are any plans to remove the Bomarc missiles from North Bay. Cadieux said there are no plans to remove them before the mid-1970s.

both its radio and television networks because of the smoking health hazard.

Directors of the publicly-owned corporation agreed on the move at an Ottawa meeting last week.

A spokesman said the operation, to cost $2,900,000, would involve shipping 27,000 tons of the material via rail to New Jersey, where it would be loaded aboard four surplus Second World War Liberty ships which would subsequently be towed to sea and sunk 20 miles from shore.

U.S. May Sink Tons of Nerve Gas at Sea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon announced Wednesday a tentative plan to ship to the east coast large amounts of chemical agents — including deadly nerve gas — for disposal in the Atlantic Ocean. One member of Congress called for an investigation to determine if the plan endangered human and marine life.

A spokesman said the operation, to cost $2,900,000, would involve shipping 27,000 tons of the material via rail to New Jersey, where it would be loaded aboard four surplus Second World War Liberty ships which would subsequently be towed to sea and sunk 20 miles from shore.

released details of the plan, which it said was tentative, after Rep. Richard McCarthy, D-N.Y., disclosed it to news men. He released letters written to Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and Transportation Secretary John Volpe questioning whether the rail shipments would endanger human lives and whether dumping the poisonous substances in the ocean would damage marine life.

A report from Elizabeth, N.J., said the plan would send tank cars full of the deadly gas through four New Jersey towns on elevated tracks.

The possibility of a leakage is "too easily to think about," said Elizabeth city council president Michael McGuire, who expected to be on the line to New Jersey's congressional delegation "first thing in the morning."

The train also would pass through neighboring Rahway, Linden and Perth Amboy, a corridor which along with Elizabeth has 300,000 persons.

McCarthy called for a study of alternative means of getting rid of the Second World War chemical agents, but Marj. Gen. Wendell Coates, the army's chief of information, told newsmen the plan was the safest that could be devised.

If the plan is finally approved, he said, the operation would begin next week and end in August. Most of the material would be shipped by rail from Rocky Mountain
